HISTORY OF THE YALE FOREST SCHOOL

YALE IN THE FORESTRY MOVEMENT

By HENRY SOLON GRAVES

Director of the Yale Forest School, 1900 to 1911, now Chief of the United States Forest Service

The Yale Forest School was established when the movement of forestry in this country was in its infancy—at a time when the majority of the people of the country were ignorant of, indifferent to, or opposed to the aims and methods of forestry. The history of the School has been coincident with a most remarkable development of forestry throughout the country. The Yale School has a very large share of credit for this development; without Yale and the other forest schools the results of the last decade could never have been achieved. No country has yet succeeded in establishing forestry on a permanent footing except through well trained foresters. Forestry had its real beginning in the United States when there were men to initiate the work of putting its principles into actual practice.

In the minds of the founders of the Yale School there was not only a recognition of the need of trained men to carry on the work of forestry, but there was also a determined purpose to set a high standard of education that would train its students for leadership in the development of the science and practice of forestry. No task before the School has been more difficult. In the early days the technical demands on the forester were small. Oftentimes his first work was purely administrative, for which a very elementary knowledge of forestry would suffice. The demand for men was at that time so great that a young man with but little training could secure a place with the Government or elsewhere. There was therefore a tremendous pressure for a short-cut education, and to omit many fundamental features of technical training that did not seem of immediate practical application. But the School consistently maintained its high technical requirements, because it was training men to develop forestry and not merely to fill certain positions that might be available.

The keynote of forestry is foresight. In the first work of organizing forestry there must be a clear vision of future development. Otherwise no real progress is possible. Every step undertaken in handling a forest has an effect on its future condition, whether it involves the building of trails, the location of cuttings, the method of cuttings, or the organization of a protective system. The man who has a proper training can look ahead and guide his work to meet the requirements of a real upbuilding of his forest. The man with no such knowledge will invariably work on a basis of immediate expediency, without consideration of what is to be the ultimate development of the forest. Many do not appreciate the vital influence of single localized operations on the development of the forest in the future, because mistakes may not be discovered or good work appreciated for a long time.

Already the need for a high standard of forest education has been demonstrated. I regard the part Yale has been able to play in maintaining this standard as one of its largest achievements; it is the real reason for the School's leadership in forestry and the confidence it has acquired throughout the country. The graduates of the School have been leaders because they have had a point of view and knowledge beyond that needed for the every-day work which they first find to do.

In addition to the educational foundations secured at the School, the graduates have shown a spirit of public service and devotion to their work that has contributed largely to their leadership. The forestry movement will have a very vital influence on the internal development and lasting prosperity of the country. Every forester is working toward an end which will benefit the nation, whether he is in public service or in the employ of a lumber company. This body of men scattered throughout all the states constitutes an educational force that is irresistible.

Through the devoted work of its Faculty and the enthusiastic and consistent spirit of loyal service of its graduates, the Yale Forest School has already accomplished results which deserve high credit. Its work, however, is still in its infancy. In performing its part in developing public forest policies, both for the Nation and the states, in building up the science of forestry, and getting its principles in actual practice, Yale has a great opportunity and a great responsibility to serve the country. When we read the history of the School contained in this volume, let it be with the feeling that it tells of the foundation for a work which everyone associated with the School aims to do for the Nation. It is an account of the past to be of help for the future.

THE YALE FOREST SCHOOL AN HISTORICAL SKETCH

By JAMES WILLIAM TOUMEY

Director of the Yale Forest School, and a professor in the School since its foundation

The first great step in forest conservation in the United States was taken in 1891 when, through the action of Congress, the President was given authority to set aside forest reservations. Previous to this time forestry in the United States was chiefly propaganda. There were less than a half dozen trained foresters in the entire country. It was soon found necessary, however, to appoint supervisors, forest rangers, and other forest officers to take charge of the newly created reservations. The work was organized with men having little or no knowledge of technical forestry. Even before the creation of the National forests some of the states had begun to develop a progressive forest policy and to acquire land for state forests. The beginnings were also made in forestry on privately owned timber land. At the beginning of the present century not only the National government but many of the states and, to some extent, private owners of large forest properties were seeking trained foresters.

As early as 1887 a course of lectures on technical forestry was given by Bernhard E. Fernow at the Massachusetts Agricultural College. This was the first instruction in forestry given by a trained forester at an educational institution in the United States. Prior to this date some of the agricultural colleges sustained chairs of botany and forestry combined. In no instance, however, were the men who occupied them trained foresters, nor did they teach technical forestry.

In 1898 Dr. Fernow resigned his position as chief of the Division of Forestry of the United States Department of Agriculture and organized and became director of the New York State College of Forestry at Cornell University. This was the first school of technical forestry in the United States. About the same time a small private school was established by Carl A. Schenck at Biltmore, N. C. The former school was abandoned after three years of successful work through the lack of state support; the latter is still in existence.

The great impetus given to American forestry through the creation of the National forests, the activities of the separate states in furthering a progressive forest policy, and the rapid expanse of the work of the Division of Forestry under the new chief, Gifford Pinchot, created a demand almost over night for a large number of technically trained men. Mr. Pinchot had been trained in the forest schools of Europe and became the leading figure in American forestry. He soon realized that his vision of forest conservation could not be attained without an able corps of men thoroughly trained in technical forestry and familiar with American life and institutions. The two schools, at Cornell and Biltmore, with uncertain tenure of life, could not be depended upon to supply the large numbers of men immediately required and the continually increasing number that would probably be necessary for some years to come.

Early in the spring of 1900 it was announced by the President of Yale University that a gift of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars had been received to endow a graduate school of forestry. Two ideas of fundamental importance stand forth in this announcement; namely, an endowed institution and a graduate school. For the first time in America the new profession of forestry was placed upon a high plane requiring the best type of scholarship and a thorough scientific foundation. The fact of an endowed institution assured permanency and the possibility of substantial and gradual development.

The gift under which the School was founded was from Mr. and Mrs. James W. Pinchot and their sons, Gifford Pinchot and Amos R. E. Pinchot. It provided for a department in the University to be known as the Yale Forest School and a summer school of forestry at Milford, Pike County, Pa. The object of the School, as expressed in the terms of the gift, is both instruction and research in forestry. The University in accepting the gift agreed to provide the necessary buildings to house the School until the new institution was in a financial position to erect buildings for its special use.

Early in the summer of 1900 Henry Solon Graves, of the Division of Forestry, was appointed director of the new School, and the following Board of Governors organized the instruction and administration:

Arthur T. Hadley, LL.D., president.

Henry S. Graves, M.A., professor of forestry.

William H. Brewer, Ph.D., professor of agriculture.

Gifford Pinchot, B.A., special lecturer on forest policy.

The School was fortunate in securing Mr. Graves as its first director, and its success is largely due to his foresight and counsels and to his high ideals of education in this comparatively new field.

Following the announcement of the School a circular was issued outlining the plan and the proposed courses of study. In June James W. Toumey, of the Division of Forestry, was appointed assistant professor of forestry.

In the organization of the School it was realized that from the standpoint of technical training two classes of men were required to successfully carry on the work in forestry in the United States. First, men trained in the broad field of technical forestry, competent to organize and administer forest property and conduct scientific investigations. Second, men especially skilled in the conduct of woods work and fitted for rangers, inspectors and foremen. In order to prepare men for the former, the Forest School was made a graduate department of the University. A summer school was maintained for several years at Milford. Entrance examinations were not required and certificates of attendance were issued at the expiration of the eight weeks' course. Because of the opportunity that it would give school teachers to become familiar with the methods of field work, particularly in silviculture and dendrology, the course was at first opened to women.

The Faculty included but one professor of forestry and one assistant professor. The remainder of the teaching staff was from the other departments of the University. Their work was supplemented by courses of special lectures by Gifford Pinchot and Frederick H. Newell.

A two-year course of study was prescribed, the terms coinciding with those of the other departments of the University.

Entrance requirements were much more liberal than at present. Graduates of universities, colleges and scientific schools of high standing were accepted without examination, provided they could show requisite knowledge of botany, geology and chemistry. Others were required to pass examinations in mathematics, botany, geology, chemistry, physics, German or French, English and political economy. Special students were admitted without examination when they were able to present other evidence of their fitness to pursue the courses given. The tuition charges were one hundred dollars per year.

Looking back from a perspective of thirteen years the curriculum is simple in the extreme, and may be characterized by the emphasis placed upon courses in botany, geology and zoölogy, and the comparatively limited work in technical forestry. The forestry subjects in the curriculum were as follows: outline of forestry, silviculture, forest management, forest measurements, forest technology, lumbering, forest protection, forest history, forest administration and state and National forestry. With the exception of one short course of six lectures given by Gifford Pinchot the entire field was covered by the director and the assistant professor.

Provision was made for field work at New Haven, Milford and in the Adirondack Mountains. In the first announcement of the courses, field work was only briefly mentioned as follows: "Frequent excursions will be taken to points of interest near New Haven. In the spring of the second year the work will be transferred from New Haven to the field, the first few weeks being spent in Pennsylvania and the remaining time in the Adirondacks."

The first term of the regular course began on Thursday, September 27, 1900. Seven students were enrolled and remained to complete the two years' course, and in addition thirteen Academic and two Sheffield students attended one or more courses. The director and four of the regular students lived in Marsh Hall, which was provided by the University for the use of the School. In November, 1900, the first annual catalogue of the School was published, and included practically the same subject matter as the preliminary announcement. There was a more detailed account of the field work, and a list of the seven students in attendance.

During the year the School received in gifts to its equipment a splendid collection of axes and a large number of wood-working tools from W. D. Simmons of St. Louis, Mo., and a valuable collection of saws from H. C. Atkins of Indianapolis, Ind. Mr. Toumey gave his herbarium containing two thousand five hundred species of indigenous trees and shrubs to the School. The library was enlarged through the gift of three hundred and twenty-five volumes from Gifford Pinchot.

Early in 1901 an illustrated circular announcing the Yale Summer School of Forestry was published. The course as planned, and later carried out, covered a period of eight weeks beginning July 8, 1901. No entrance examinations were required, but no one under seventeen years of age was admitted. The teaching staff consisted of the director and the assistant professor. The following courses were offered: introduction to forestry, silviculture, forest botany, forest measurements and forest protection. Twenty-seven students were enrolled, seven of whom were women. The latter had all the privileges of the School with the exception of living and boarding in camp.

At the opening of the regular course in 1901 the previous year's class of seven members was augmented by three men from the Division of Forestry. The Junior class had a membership of twenty-one. The School was now for the first time in full operation, and the Faculty was called upon to give instruction in all the courses offered in the curriculum. In many respects, from the standpoint of instruction, it was the most critical period in the history of the School. With more than four times as many students as the previous year, and with the technical courses of the Senior year given for the first time, the burden of instruction was very great. The following courses were added: forest entomology, forest administration and law, and forest administration abroad.

During the second year the field work was more fully organized. A year before an agreement was made by the School and the New Haven Water Company whereby a portion of the forest property of the company was placed under the management of the School, thus making a large body of woodland near New Haven available for purposes of instruction and experiment. The field work in silviculture was chiefly confined to this tract. Arrangements were made for the Seniors to spend the last three weeks of the autumn term in lumber camps in northern New England.

After the Easter recess the work with the Senior class was transferred to Central Valley, N. Y., where the entire spring term was devoted to field work. A working plan was prepared for a forest of 15,000 acres owned by E. H. Harriman of New York.

On the completion of their work, for the college year ending June, 1902, the degree Master of Forestry was conferred upon eight members of the Senior class, and the first graduates of the School were ready to begin their professional careers in a field just beginning to develop rapidly in the United States. Soon after graduating, two members of the class, namely, Roy L. Marston and Alfred Akerman, were engaged as instructors.

The second session of the summer school was under Mr. Toumey, who was assisted by Walter Mulford, State Forester of Connecticut. Nineteen students were in attendance, of whom six were women. A large percentage of the male students were undergraduates from Eastern universities and colleges, nine of whom later entered the School for the regular two-year course.

The curriculum was greatly extended and the courses re-arranged during the third year. In September, 1902, Alfred Akerman and Roy L. Marston began their work as instructors. The position of assistant in botany, occupied the previous year by C. E. Preston, was filled by Arthur H. Graves. Howard S. Betts was appointed assistant in the wood testing laboratory, and Herman von Schrenk lecturer on diseases of trees to take the position formerly occupied by William C. Sturgis.

At the opening of the term twenty-six men enrolled in the entering class. Heretofore the students had been largely drawn from the Eastern states. In this class, however, all parts of the United States were represented, and one student came from Japan. The National character of the School for the first time became apparent in its student body. The course formerly given by Mr. Verrill was given by Mr. Britton, State Entomologist of Connecticut. The courses in introduction to forestry and history of forestry were taken by Mr. Akerman, who also assisted Director Graves in the work in silviculture. The courses in lumbering and forest protection were taken by Mr. Marston, who also assisted Director Graves in forest management. The work in engineering was extended. Field surveying was given by Mr. Tracy, and a new course in forest engineering was under Mr. Marston. Through the generosity of George H. Myers, M.F. '02, three thousand dollars was received to pay for the equipment of a laboratory in forest technology, and instruction in timber testing was given by Mr. Betts. Through coöperation with the Division of Forestry the laboratory was opened for investigation on the mechanical properties of wood.

In the early winter (December, 1902) the members of the Senior class were located in lumber camps in Maine, New Hampshire, New York, Michigan, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Florida and Texas. Each student prepared a detailed report on lumbering in the region studied. The spring field work with the Senior class was at West Point Military Reservation, where a study was made of a large hardwood tract east of the Hudson River. The area was mapped and a working plan made under which it has since been managed.

There was a large increase in attendance, the registration in the regular course being forty-four students compared with thirty-three the previous year. They represented twenty-three collegiate institutions in fifteen states.

The endowment of the School was increased through the gift of fifty thousand dollars by Mrs. J. W. Pinchot and Gifford Pinchot. This gift enabled the Governing Board very materially to modify the courses of study, add a summer term to the regular course, and greatly increase the field work. The principal additions to the equipment of the School were through the purchase of a portion of the technical library of the late Charles Mohr.

The third session of the summer school, which opened on July 1, 1903, was reduced to seven weeks. Mr. Marston was in charge. The curriculum remained unchanged with the exception of greater diversity in the work, due to the larger number of special lectures. Fifteen students were in attendance, none of whom were women. Of those in attendance seven later entered the regular course. Mr. Akerman resigned at the close of the collegiate year in June and accepted the position of State Forester of Massachusetts.

The registration in the regular course was sixty-six, representing thirty-three collegiate institutions in twenty-three states. There was one student each from the Philippine Islands and Sweden. The large increase in students in the Senior class was partly due to the discontinuance of the College of Forestry at Cornell University. Special arrangements were made whereby students from that institution were admitted to the Yale Forest School, and ten men availed themselves of this arrangement.

Although no additions were made to the list of regular instructors, it became necessary to employ a number of temporary assistants because of the unexpectedly large number of students. Walter Mulford was employed to assist in the courses in silviculture and forest mensuration, and Austin Cary in the field work of the Senior class at Milford. Harry Tiemann, M.F. '03, was appointed engineer in the technological laboratory in the place of H. S. Betts, and continued in this position until 1909, when work in coöperation with the United States Government was discontinued.

In late December a disastrous fire broke out in Marsh Hall. It started in the basement and burned or severely injured the testing laboratory, the assembly hall, two recitation rooms and the instrument room. The School records, the library and herbarium were saved. For two weeks at the beginning of the winter term recitations and lectures were held at the Sheffield Scientific School. The restored building was in many respects better adapted to the requirements of the School than before the fire. The equipment at the summer school was greatly improved by the construction of three buildings which were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Pinchot. Through the further generosity of George H. Myers the forest library of the late Dr. Robert Hartig was purchased and donated to the School. This collection contained fifteen hundred books and pamphlets representing the accumulation of many years. It is particularly rich in German periodicals and early books and pamphlets on forestry, many of which are long out of print and difficult to obtain.

For the first time the spring field work of the regular course was conducted at Milford, with Mr. Marston and Austin Cary, instructors. It later became apparent that it would be necessary to rearrange the curriculum and increase the amount of field work in order to realize more fully the object of instruction. During the winter an announcement was published of proposed changes in the curriculum. Experience had shown that the courses in forest mensuration and silviculture could not be satisfactorily taught without more field work. It became necessary to add to the Junior year a term wholly devoted to field work. Accordingly, the Junior year in 1904 opened at Milford at the same time as the summer school.

Heretofore the tuition for the Junior and Senior years was one hundred dollars each. Beginning in July, 1904, it was raised to one hundred and fifty dollars for the Junior year, and a year later to one hundred and twenty-five dollars for the Senior year. To the present no further changes in tuition charges have been made.

Thereafter the Junior class met at the School camp at Milford with the summer school students. The field and classroom work of the two classes, however, were wholly distinct and usually under separate instructors. The session of the summer school was seven weeks as in the previous year, but the regular term continued three weeks longer. Two distinct bodies of students tented in the same encampment and dined together, but the character of the instruction was necessarily wholly different.

1904-1905

Under this new arrangement the Junior courses in the summer of 1904 were given by Director Graves, assisted by E. E. Carter, M.F. '04. Mr. Toumey was assisted by A. H. Graves in carrying the work of the summer school. The work with the Juniors was confined to the following courses: foundation of silviculture, treatment of woodlands and forest mensuration. Thirty-four men were enrolled in the Junior class and eighteen in the summer school.

The experiment of shifting a large part of the field work to an extra summer term proved successful. At the opening of the autumn term at New Haven the total attendance was sixty-three exclusive of those from other departments.

The next year surveying was transferred to the summer term. On January 2, 1905, both the Junior and Senior classes met in Washington, D. C., to attend the Forest Congress. For one week the students attended the sessions of the Congress and the following week a series of specially arranged addresses and lectures to which students from other schools were also invited.

The Forest Club, composed of Faculty and students, was organized and has continued to meet on alternate Wednesday evenings except in the summer term. During the early winter a group of Seniors with a smaller number of Juniors met and organized the Robin Hood Society of Foresters. After an existence of six years the organization was discontinued. The accumulated funds in the treasury of the society to the extent of more than five hundred dollars were contributed to the Graduates Fund of the School.

Shortly after the opening of the winter term Director Graves was commissioned by the Forest Service to visit India and the Philippine Islands to secure information relative to educational instruction in forestry that would best fit students for the practice of forestry in tropical regions and particularly in the Philippine Islands. During the six months of Director Graves' absence Mr. Toumey was acting director, and B. E. Fernow, the former director of the New York State College of Forestry, conducted some of the courses. A. F. Hawes, M.F. '03, State Forester of Connecticut, also assisted in instruction.

As in the previous year, after the Easter recess, the work with the Senior class was transferred to the School camp at Milford. It became apparent, however, that it was unwise to continue the spring field work at this place since the men were already thoroughly familiar with the region. It seemed desirable that a wholly new field be selected for the spring work where lumbering operations were in progress and where conditions were better suited for the preparation of forest maps, the projection of logging roads, the estimating of timber and the making of working plans. Since the spring of 1905 it has been conducted on large tracts of virgin timber in the South.

The most important addition to the collections of the School during the year was a large assortment of forest products from the St. Louis Exposition. A former collection of exotic woods from the Buffalo Exposition had been severely damaged the year before in the fire at the School. The material from St. Louis and much besides is stored because of lack of space for display. As soon as a School building is erected this material can be arranged and made available for exhibition and purposes of instruction.

As in former years the majority of the twenty-nine members of the graduating class entered the Forest Service. The rapid expansion of the work of the Government under the direction of Gifford Pinchot gave opportunity for all who desired to begin the practice of their profession on the National Forests, which had been only recently transferred from the Department of the Interior to the Department of Agriculture and placed directly under the management of the Forest Service.

The year beginning July, 1905, was the most satisfactory from the standpoint of the curriculum since the organization of the School. The instruction was made more efficient and foundations were laid for still further improvements the following year. The important change in the engineering courses became effective at the opening of the summer term. The course was conducted by J. C. Tracy, assisted by C. S. Farnham and W. L. Ulrich. For the first time a course in field dendrology was included in the summer work. Since 1905 there have been no marked changes in the courses as given at Milford. Only three courses are offered; namely, surveying, forest mensuration and field dendrology. Among the thirty-six men enrolled in the regular course were students from Canada, Norway, Sandwich Islands and South Africa. Eighteen attended the summer school, five of whom later entered the regular course.

Herman H. Chapman, M.F. '04, of the Forest Service, was employed as assistant during the winter and spring terms. A course in State Forest law was given during the winter by Mr. Chapman. In April Mr. Marston resigned to enter the lumber business in Maine, and the field work in lumbering as formerly conducted by locating the students in lumber camps for a period of three weeks after the Thanksgiving recess was abandoned. The Senior field work of the spring term was conducted at Waterville, N. H., on a tract of 22,000 acres owned by the International Paper Company. The topographic work was under the direction of Henry Gannett, geographer of the United States Geological Survey. The forest work was conducted by Mr. Chapman.

The field work in silviculture was better organized, the autumn term being devoted to silvical excursions and investigations in the woods about New Haven and the remainder of the year to thinnings, improvement cuttings, nursery work, seeding and planting.

The importance of lumbering as a part of the curriculum was recognized by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association at their annual meeting in 1905, and they voted to raise a fund to endow a chair of lumbering. Sixty thousand dollars was immediately pledged, and in the autumn turned over to the treasurer of the University, and in 1910 an additional forty thousand dollars was received. This fund has been of great value to the School as it made possible the appointment of R. C. Bryant of the Forest Service to take charge of the work in lumbering. Mr. Bryant began his work in September, 1906.

During the year an Advisory Board was appointed from the graduates and proved very important in furthering the interests of the School and bringing the alumni into closer touch with its activities. The members of the first Advisory Board were G. H. Myers, M.F. '02, J. G. Peters, M.F. '03, and W. B. Greeley, M.F. '04.

The year 1906 marked a long step forward in improving the curriculum. This was made possible through the addition to the Faculty of three instructors in forestry, namely Messrs. Chapman, Bryant and Hawley, each of whom was given a definite line of work which they have been pursuing and strengthening up to the present time. This marks a definite stage in the development of the curriculum because it is the beginning of the separation of the work into specific courses continuously handled by the same instructors. It gave an opportunity for the courses to develop and expand with succeeding years. Hitherto the lack of funds and available instructors of experience prevented the development of a Faculty adequate for the constantly increasing work of the School. The work of instruction as then organized was conducted by three groups of men: first, the regular Faculty, consisting of five resident members whose time was wholly given to the School and who conducted the technical courses in forestry; second, members of other departments of the University who gave specially arranged courses in auxiliary subjects; third, non-resident, special lecturers.

An important feature of the year was the development of the course in lumbering under Mr. Bryant. The work was organized with the advice of a committee from the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. This advisory committee consisted of Nelson W. McLeod and Clifford I. Millard of St. Louis and Frederick E. Weyerhaeuser of St. Paul. The lectures in this subject were given by Mr. Bryant assisted by the members of the committee as special lecturers. Through the generosity of J. B. White the plant of the Missouri Lumber & Mining Company in southern Missouri was placed at the disposal of the School for the spring work of the Senior class. The work in the woods was conducted by Mr. Chapman, who was assisted in the topographic work by Henry Gannett of the United States Geological Survey. Mr. Bryant had charge of the work relating directly to lumbering. This proved so successful that the field work of the Senior class has since followed the same general plan.

The increased demand for foresters by the National government, by states, and by private owners of woodland, resulted in the rapid development of facilities for instruction. As early as 1907 seventeen institutions in the United States and Canada were offering instruction in forestry and five institutions had fully organized departments or schools for high-grade training. The standard required for the profession of forestry was becoming higher each year and already many of the graduates of minor schools found it difficult to find remunerative positions.

Six classes had now graduated with a total enrollment of 127. This does not include 37 men who did not take the full course. The occupations of the 127 graduates of the first six classes, in July, 1907, is shown in the following table:

Hitherto there had been but one program of study prescribed for all students. All subjects in the regular course were required for the degree. A greater number of students were each year applying for admittance with advanced standing, having already had courses in technical forestry in other institutions. To supply this demand a number of advanced courses in forest technology, silviculture, lumbering and forest management were offered for the first time.

The spring work of the Senior class was conducted in Alabama on a tract of virgin forest owned by the Kaul Lumber Company. Hitherto nearly all the field work at New Haven was at Maltby Park, a comparatively small portion of the lands owned by the New Haven Water Company. During this year Mr. Hawley was employed as consulting forester for the company. Under this arrangement the School obtained the privilege of conducting field work on all the lands owned by the company, aggregating eight thousand acres, of which more than one-half is covered with forest, under an organized system of management. The open land is gradually being planted. This large tract of permanent forest near New Haven and within easy reach of the School is yearly becoming of greater importance for purposes of instruction.

With the decrease in the number of special lectures in the regular course, the Forest Club has been the avenue through which foresters and other scientific men visiting New Haven have been introduced to the School.

At the close of the work of the Senior class at New Haven in February, 1908, formal exercises were held for the first time. The principal address was by Gifford Pinchot. Other speakers were President Hadley, the Director of the School, W. B. Greeley and H. R. MacMillan, the latter representing the graduating class. These exercises continue to be held each year at New Haven before the Senior class leaves for the South.

1908-1909

In 1908 R. C. Bryant and R. C. Hawley were promoted to the rank of assistant professors. It was becoming more and more apparent, in order to meet the needs of technical instruction, that it would be necessary to lengthen the course to three years or else increase the requirements for admission. The latter course was followed. Early in the year a circular was issued announcing that candidates for admission for the degree Master of Forestry, in addition to completing an undergraduate college course, must have pursued certain specified subjects. The new requirements did not go into effect for two years in order that undergraduates then preparing for the School could arrange to cover the required work. Arrangements had been made with the Sheffield Scientific School whereby students in that institution, by taking certain studies in the Forest School during the last year of their undergraduate course, could complete the work at the Forest School in one year. With the gradual extension of the curriculum and the increase in the number of required subjects, this arrangement became more and more difficult. Through action of the Governing Board the old arrangement was discontinued, to go into effect at the opening of the school year 1910.

The field work of the Senior class was conducted at Doucette, Tyler County, Texas, on the lands of the Thompson Brothers Lumber Company. The New Haven Water Company began the extensive planting of waste areas. Nurseries were established and plans made to reforest by planting during the next decade from 1,500 to 2,000 acres of open land. The work on the forested areas was progressing rapidly and already there were many instructive illustrations of the results of applied forestry.

The tenth class to enroll at the School entered in July, 1909. There had been a gradual increase in attendance since the organization of the School. From seven students in 1900 the number had increased in 1909 to thirty-seven in the Senior class and forty-five in the Junior, not including five enrolled for the summer term only. In addition to the regular students fifteen were enrolled in the short course and twelve from other departments of the University.

This year marked the discontinuance of the summer school. The rapid development of secondary forest schools and departments of forestry in various institutions lessened somewhat the demand for this course. Furthermore the large increase in the number of students in the regular course made it difficult to provide instructors from among the members of the Faculty. During the existence of the summer school there were enrolled a total of 159 students or a yearly average of 18.

S. J. Record was appointed instructor in forestry early in the year and W. O. Filley field assistant. In January the School suffered a distinct loss in the indefinite leave of absence granted the director on his appointment by President Taft to the position of Forester of the United States Forest Service. Mr. Toumey became acting director. The Senior field work was conducted at Clarks, La., on the property of the Central Louisiana Lumber Company.

The large increase in attendance called for more space for laboratories and lecture rooms. Marsh Hall was overcrowded, making it necessary to duplicate certain courses. As there was no prospect of a new building suitable for the needs of the School, the timber testing laboratory, only used for a few months each year, was dismantled to make space for more imperative needs.

Early in the year Mrs. Morris K. Jesup of New York gave an endowment of $100,000 for a professorship of silviculture, and Mr. Toumey was appointed the Morris K. Jesup professor of silviculture.

At the opening of the summer term in 1910 it became apparent that an increasing number of men were being drawn from other institutions where forestry was taught. During the year five graduates in forestry from other schools were in attendance. Twenty-six states and foreign countries were represented in the student body, which was the same as in the previous year. No change in the distribution of the student body, due to the rapid development of forest schools and departments of forestry elsewhere in the country, was apparent. With the beginning of the year the curriculum was rearranged and all the courses became technical in character. The following changes were made in the teaching staff: Messrs. Chapman and Bryant were made full professors, S. J. Record was promoted to be assistant professor and W. O. Filley resigned and accepted the position of assistant forester of Connecticut.

The Senior field work was conducted at Trinity, Texas. The unusually large class made it necessary to employ two temporary field assistants, C. A. Hoar, M.F. '10, and Harold Fay, M.F. '10.

Nearly three years previous the task of increasing the resources of the School by five hundred thousand dollars was undertaken. The large increase in the number of students made the need of a new building almost imperative. Money was needed for salary increases and for experimental work and publications. At the close of the year the total receipts toward this fund were two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. At the end of the year forty-three men completed the course and received the degree Master of Forestry. This is the largest number that received the degree in a single year since the organization of the School.

For the past two years the requirements for admission were given considerable attention. In the curriculum as first formed there were many botanical, zoölogical and other courses which in their scope paralleled the undergraduate work in colleges and universities. These subjects were deemed necessary because most applicants were poorly prepared in them, and it appeared advisable to incorporate them in the requirements for admission. The applicant must now hold a degree from a high-grade university, college or technical school and in addition present evidence that he has taken at least one full year in college or university botany, including general morphology, histology and physiology of plants; at least one college course in zoölogy, physics, inorganic chemistry, geology, economics, mechanical drawing, the completion of mathematics through trigonometry, and has a reading knowledge of French or German.

The effect of this was apparent in the class that entered under the new requirements in 1911. It resulted in a marked advance in scholarship due to a more thorough preparation in the sciences which are a foundation for forestry. In most respects the first year's operation of the new schedule was highly satisfactory. The elimination of general science and most of the special lecture courses gave the much needed opportunity to increase the technical work. The requirements in both silviculture and management were nearly doubled. There was a sharp falling off in attendance, but to what extent it was due to this change is not known. It is believed to have been partly due to the rapid increase in the number of schools. The attendance for the year was sixty, a decrease of forty-two from that of the previous year. This made no appreciable difference in the wide distribution of the students, as the sixty men enrolled were from twenty-five states.

The revised schedule, calling for additional field work in silviculture, made it necessary for the Junior class to spend two weeks of the spring term in the Adirondack Mountains. As in previous years the Senior field work was conducted in the South. The Crossett Lumber Company, Crossett, Ark., granted the use of their property for this work.

The curriculum at this time offered instruction in thirty-six courses in forestry subjects, all of a technical nature. They varied in length from one to three terms with the exception of two short courses on special subjects by outside lecturers. It was apparent that the work could not be materially extended, without putting too great a burden on the students, unless some of the courses offered were elective. It was believed to be impossible to omit any of the required courses and still provide an all-round training in technical forestry.

Because of the continued absence of Mr. Graves his resignation as director was accepted and Mr. Toumey, who had served as acting director for two years, was made director. Mr. Graves retained his position as a member of the Governing Board and of the Faculty, with leave extended for another year. Arrangements were completed whereby Mr. Record, beginning with the year 1912-13, would carry the work in technology formerly given by Mr. Dean and the course on the classification and structure of wood formerly given by A. H. Graves.

For the first time since the organization of the School the library was placed in charge of a trained librarian, Miss I. M. Tisdale, formerly on the staff of the University Library. The library had grown to such proportions that this was necessary in order to properly catalogue and put it in form for ready reference and greater usefulness.

The publication of a series of bulletins, memoirs and miscellaneous works relating to the School was begun. This was of vast importance as it gave the School a wider field of usefulness and brought it in closer touch with the alumni and the general public.

A graduate Advisory Board had been elected in 1905 in order to bring the School into closer relations with the alumni. At first it had consisted of but three members, but was later enlarged to five, and has been of continually increasing usefulness. During this year the School was brought into closer relations with the alumni through the organization of the alumni association with officers and class secretaries. This association met at New Haven on December 20 and 21, 1911, and the following officers were elected for five years:

President, W. B. Greeley, M.F. '04.

Vice-president, T. S. Woolsey, Jr., M.F. '03.

Secretary and treasurer, H. H. Chapman, M.F. '04.

This association not only afforded an opportunity for the organization of the alumni into an effective body and familiarized them with the progress of the School, but it served as a stimulus to permanently establish a graduates' fund. The subscriptions to this fund during the first meeting of the association were more than four thousand dollars. A gift of one thousand dollars was received from William Wheeler of Buffalo, N. Y., the income to be given yearly as a prize for meritorious work in silviculture.

The first number of the series of bulletins and memoirs published by the School was issued in February, 1912. This is "A Classification for Forestry Literature" and is the classification used in the School library. In February, 1912, the report of the alumni reunion was published and distributed. Two important manuals dealing with forestry subjects were published by members of the Faculty during the year, namely: "Forestry in New England" by Mr. Hawley, in collaboration with Mr. Hawes, State Forester of Vermont, and "Identification of the Economic Woods of the United States" by Mr. Record.

A conference of American Forest Schools was called in December, 1909, to consider the aim, scope, grade and length of curriculum as the first step in the standardization of forestry education. At this conference a committee was appointed to draw up a plan for the standardization of the requirements for technical training in forestry. Director Graves was appointed chairman; other members of the committee were B. E. Fernow, R. T. Fisher, Filibert Roth and Gifford Pinchot. A second conference was called in December, 1911. Nearly all American institutions offering instruction in forestry were represented. The plan of the committee was discussed in detail and it was agreed to publish the report in the Forestry Quarterly. The committee was continued, and on the resignation of the chairman his place was taken by Mr. Toumey. The report of the committee was published in Volume X, Number 3, of the Forestry Quarterly, and widely distributed. The importance of this report, its influence on forestry education in America, and the part taken in it by the Yale Forest School, calls for its recognition in this historical sketch.

The total number of students enrolled during the year was fifty. It became still more evident that the marked falling off in attendance, first noticeable in the previous year's class and still more conspicuous in the enrollment for the year 1912-13, was due to two fundamental causes: first, the continued increase in the facilities for forestry education in the United States; second, the keener competition for profitable employment after graduation. To what extent these conditions will affect future attendance at the school it is uncertain. Future classes are likely to be smaller and to include a constantly increasing number of students from other schools who come to Yale to complete their technical training.

Shortly after the organization of the alumni association in December, 1911, a movement was set on foot to publish a quarterly to be known as the Yale Forest School News. The graduate Advisory Board undertook the financing and management of the proposed publication. The first number of this new quarterly appeared in January, 1913, with the following officers in charge:

Editor, W. B. Greeley, M.F. '04.

Alumni notes, H. H. Chapman, M.F. '04.

Managing editor, S. J. Record, M.F. '05.

The Yale Forest School News was well received from the first. It serves a much needed purpose as a medium for communication between the alumni and the officers of instruction.

Bulletin 2, "Prolonging the Cut of Southern Pine," by Messrs. Chapman and Bryant, was published in February, 1913.

The field work of the Senior class was conducted at Warren, Ark., and the spring field work of the Junior class in the Adirondack Mountains.

In June, 1913, six hundred and twenty-five acres of land at Keene, N. H., were presented to the School by George H. Myers, M.F. '02, as the nucleus for a School forest.

OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE

This historical sketch of the development of the Yale Forest School from its organization until the close of the school year in June, 1913, would not be complete without a brief statement relating to its outlook for the future. As stated in the address of the director before the alumni in December, 1911, the future development of the School must be along the following lines:

- a. In adding to the efficiency of the present courses;
- b. In establishing elective courses in the Senior year;
- c. In increasing our facilities for research and advanced work.

The need of the first of these is always present because no course is so complete that it does not require constant attention on the part of the instructor in order to keep it abreast of the times and effective from an educational standpoint.

As regards the second, it is believed that the time is already at hand when elective courses should be considered. Because of the large amount of required work it is not possible to add many optional courses, such as the course on park and street trees offered for the first time in 1911, and four proposed optional courses to be given for the first time in 1913-14. Additional courses must be largely elective in the Senior year, substituted for some of those required at the present time.

Forestry is a very broad and diversified subject. The training required for work in one particular branch may be quite different from that required in another. Thus a man who devotes himself to the reproduction, development and growth of timber should specialize in silviculture and management, while one whose chief attention is given to utilization should specialize in lumbering and technology.

Regarding the third, it is useless to offer advanced work unless there are students prepared to take it. In general, such work is only open to those who have already completed the regular course or what is deemed equivalent in other institutions. Fellowships are needed to stimulate advanced work and to induce able men to come to Yale and continue along some particular line in forestry.

With the expanded work of the school it is possible that the best interests of the profession can be served by opening certain courses to men with woods experience who are not college or university graduates, but who desire to enter the School as special students in order to secure instruction along some particular line.

The Treasurer's reports for the past twelve years show the yearly income from tuition and from endowment to be as follows:

	Income from Tuition	Income from Endowment
1900		$ 861.52
1901	$ 1,240.00	6,666.80
1902	3,373.84	7,351.05
1903	4,585.32	7,224.71
1904	6,859.51	8,902.42
1905	5,997.50	8,568.95
1906	6,026.34	7,951.66
1907	6,469.34	9,507.89
1908	7,269.41	10,057.62
1909	8,085.24	10,811.47
1910	11,681.39	12,280.22
1911	11,720.50	17,701.74
1912	7,765.76	20,706.40

From this table it appears that the increase in annual income is from both tuition and endowment. With our student body approximately the same in numbers as now, our present endowment will carry the work of the School as now conducted and provide for minor extensions, particularly in the direction of publications. It will not, however, entirely provide for necessary increases in the salaries of the younger members of the Faculty which must be met in the immediate future, or for the extension of the curriculum and the advancement of the School along the various lines already begun or that have been suggested.

With the smaller classes of the past two years Marsh Hall as now arranged provides sufficient space for necessary lecture rooms, but laboratory facilities are insufficient, the library is overcrowded and there is no space for the display of collections.

The work accomplished by the School is expressed in the biographical records of her alumni which appear in this volume. These records clearly show to what extent Yale men are identified with and are responsible for the development of forestry in America.

CLASS OF 1902

GRADUATES HOLDING DEGREE OF M.F.

Alfred Akerman

Athens, Ga.†

Alfred Akerman was born July 3, 1876, in Cartersville, Ga., the son of Amos Tappan Akerman, district attorney and attorney general of the United States, and Martha Rebecca (Galloway) Akerman. He is the grandson on his father's side of Benjamin Akerman and Olive (Melvin) Akerman, and on his mother's side of Samuel Galloway and Elizabeth (Scudder) Galloway. He has six brothers: Benjamin Akerman, Walter Akerman, Alexander Akerman, Joseph Akerman, B.A. Franklin College, University of Georgia '94, and M.D. Johns Hopkins '00, Charles Akerman, B.A. Franklin College, University of Georgia, and B.L. University of Georgia, and Clement Akerman, B.A. Franklin College, University of Georgia.

He was prepared at Cartersville High School and received the degree of B.A. from Franklin College, University of Georgia, in 1898. Before entering the Yale Forest School he studied at Berlin and Tuebingen. He was employed at different times as a reporter, a bank clerk and clerk for a lumber concern.

He was married October 15, 1902, in New Haven, Conn., to Miss Adeline Sophia Brown of New Haven, Conn., daughter of John Hallock Brown and Sophia (Price) Brown. They have three daughters: Catherine Akerman, born August 6, 1903, in New Haven, Conn.; Ruth Akerman, born January 24, 1905, in Cambridge, Mass.; Elfreda Akerman, born February 1, 1907, in Athens, Ga., and two sons: Robert Akerman, born November 25, 1908, in Athens, Ga., and Nigel Akerman, born October 29, 1910, in Athens, Ga.

Akerman is professor of forestry at the University of Georgia. After graduating from the Yale Forest School, he held the positions successively of instructor at the Yale Forest School, forest assistant in the United States Forest Service, state forester of Connecticut, and state forester of Massachusetts. He has occupied his present position since July 1, 1906.

† The best permanent addresses are indicated by italics.

He is a Presbyterian. In politics he is affiliated with the Democratic party. He served at one time in the state militia and is a member of the Society of American Foresters. He traveled in Germany in 1902.

He has published Bulletins 1, 2, 3 and 5, Mass. Forester's Office, and several articles in Forest, Fish and Game.

Charles S. Chapman

Business address, 719 Yeon Building, Portland, Ore.

Residence, Alexandra Court, Portland, Ore.

Charles Sidney Chapman was born April 2, 1880, in Westbrook, Conn., the son of Charles H. Chapman and Helen (Chalker) Chapman. His father served as an officer in the navy during the Civil War, and in the latter years of his life was engaged in farming. He has two sisters: Estella and Mary Chapman.

He was prepared in the public schools in Westbrook, Conn., and in 1898 was graduated with the degree of B.Agr. from Storrs (now Connecticut) Agricultural College.

He is unmarried.

Chapman is secretary and manager of the Oregon Forest Fire Association with headquarters at Portland, Ore. He was forest assistant in the United States Forest Service from 1902 to 1905; forester for the E. P. Burton Lumber Company at Charleston, S. C., from 1905 to 1907; inspector of timber sales in the Forest Service in 1907-08; chief of the office of organization and assistant forester, operation, in 1908-09; forester, District 6, Washington, Oregon and Alaska in 1909-10.

In politics Chapman is independent. He served as sergeant of the Third Connecticut Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American War, but was not sent out of the United States. He is a member of the Portland Press Club, the Portland Commercial Club, the Oregon Conservation Association, Society of American Foresters and the Masonic Order.

He has written: Working plan for forest lands in Berkeley County, S. C., Bull. U. S. Forest Service; numerous articles in Portland, Ore., papers for Sunday editions and in trade journals. He has delivered many addresses on forest subjects.

Alfred K. Chittenden

Business address, Engineering Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill.

Residence, Champaign, Ill.

Alfred Knight Chittenden was born October 28, 1879, in New Haven, Conn., the son of Professor Russell Henry Chittenden, Ph.D., Sc.D., LL.D., Yale '75 S., director of the Sheffield Scientific School, and Gertrude Louise (Baldwin) Chittenden. He has two sisters, Edith Russell Chittenden, B.A. Smith '99, and Lilla Millard (Chittenden) Barbour, wife of Henry Gray Barbour, B.A. Trinity '06, M.D. Johns Hopkins '10, who was appointed assistant professor of pharmacology in the Yale Medical School in 1912.

He was prepared at the Hopkins Grammar School of New Haven and graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1900. In the Scientific School he took the Civil Engineer Course, received general scholastic honors, and was a member of the scholarship society, Sigma Xi.

He was married February 11, 1908, in Washington, D. C., to Miss Lulu W. Brower of Washington.

Chittenden is director of the engineering experiment station and lecturer on timber and timber resources at the College of Engineering of the University of Illinois. After graduation from the Forest School he went abroad for seven months to study forest conditions in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, France and England. On returning to the United States he entered the United States Forest Service and has since worked in nearly every state in the Union, serving successively as forest assistant, chief of the section of coöperation, assistant district forester and forest inspector. For a year, in 1907, he was in private business in Baltimore, doing consulting forestry work under the firm name of Chittenden & Patterson. On September 20, 1911, he was appointed forester in the United States Indian Service with headquarters in Washington, D. C. This position he held until receiving his present appointment.

He writes: "The Indian Service has a well developed Forest Service which is handling all timber matters on the Indian Reservations. There are thirty-one saw mills on the reservations operated for the benefit of the Indians by the Government. These mills vary in size from small portable mills to the large mill, with a daily capacity of over 200,000 feet, on the Menominee Indian Reservation in Wisconsin.

"The total area of Indian timber lands is roughly estimated at 6,500,000 acres, containing approximately 38,000,000,000 feet of timber, and valued at over $84,000,000. In order to protect and properly administer these resources a considerable force of men is employed, consisting of forest guards, rangers, scalers, lumbermen and technically trained foresters. The work is in many respects similar to that of the Forest Service, except that no purely investigative work is carried on and that where it seems advisable timber is logged, handled and manufactured by the Service, the lumber being sold or disposed of for the benefit of the Indians. A considerable amount of permanent improvement work is being carried on, roads, trails, telephone lines, cabins, corrals and fences being constructed. The Indian timber lands, unlike the National Forests, were not set aside for protective purposes, but for the use and benefit of the Indians. Much of the timber is located on good agricultural soil, some of which is allotted. In such cases clear cutting is practised, all the timber being cut and removed, and the Indians encouraged to farm this land. On the really forest soil, however, forestry methods are followed in logging."

He has published: Forest conditions in Northern New Hampshire, Bull. 55, U. S. Forest Service; The red gum, Bull. 58, U. S. Forest Service.

George E. Clement

275 Warren Street, Boston, Mass.

George Edwards Clement was born April 21, 1877, in Vienna, Austria, the son of George W. Clement.

He received the degree of B.A. from Harvard University in 1900.

He is unmarried.

Clement is at present engaged in a study of the gypsy moth situation in New England, with particular reference to preventing its spread by silvicultural measures. This study is in coöperation between the Forest Service and the Bureau of Entomology. Besides his work in the Service he has been employed as forester for the Great Northern Paper Company and for Fisher & Bryant, consulting foresters.

C. Temple Emmet

Stony Brook, Long Island, N. Y.

Christopher Temple Emmet was born July 8, 1868, in Pelham, N. Y., the son of William Jenkins Emmet and Julia Colt (Pierson) Emmet. He is the grandson on his father's side of Robert Emmet and Rosina (Hubley) Emmet, and on his mother's side of Josiah G. Pierson and Julia (Colt) Pierson. He has four brothers: Robert Temple Emmet, a graduate of West Point; William LeRoy Emmet, a graduate of Annapolis; Devereux Emmet, B.A. Columbia '83 and LL.B. '85, and Richard Stockton Emmet; and three sisters: Rosina Emmet, Lydia Field Emmet and Jane Erin Emmet.

He was prepared at Bishops College School, Lennoxville, Quebec, Canada, and at the Stevens High School, and in 1891 graduated with the degree of M.E. from Stevens Institute of Technology.

He was married October 27, 1896, in Red Hook, N. Y., to Miss Alida Chanler, daughter of John Winthrop Chanler and Margaret (Astor) Chanler. They have four daughters: Elizabeth Winthrop Emmet, born September 8, 1897, in Newport, R. I.; Margaret Chanler Emmet, born April 10, 1899, in New York City; Hester Alida Emmet, born December 5, 1901, in New Haven, Conn., and Jane Erin Emmet, born May 16, 1908, in Freiburg, Baden, Germany; and three sons: Christopher Temple Emmet, Jr., born March 18, 1900, in Port Chester, N. Y.; Winthrop Stuyvesant Emmet, born September 4, 1910, in Freiburg, Baden, Germany, and William Patten Emmet, born July 26, 1911, in Freiburg, Baden, Germany. Another son, Egerton Chanler Emmet, was born March 9, 1907, in Stony Brook, N. Y., and died December 18, 1907.

Emmet is engaged in farming at Stony Brook, Long Island.

He is an Episcopalian, and a member of the following societies: Academy of Sciences; American Geographical Society; National Geographic Society; New York Zoölogical Society; American Museum of Natural History; American Forestry Association; Metropolitan Museum of Art; Audubon Society; Knickerbocker Club; Racquet and Tennis Club and St. Anthony Club of New York; Tobique Salmon Club and Ore Hill Shooting Club.

William C. Hodge, Jr.

Business address, Forest Service, San Francisco, Calif.

Residence, 3240 Pacific Avenue, San Francisco, Calif.

William Churchill Hodge, Jr., was born October 24, 1877, in Buffalo, N. Y., the son of William Churchill Hodge and Helen Maria (Hopkins)

Hodge. He is the grandson on his father's side of William Hodge of Buffalo, N. Y., son of William Hodge of Buffalo, N. Y., son of Benjamin Hodge of Connecticut. On his mother's side he is the grandson of Nelson K. Hopkins of Buffalo, N. Y. He has two brothers: Harold Hodge and Sheldon Hodge.

He was prepared at the Buffalo High School and at Phillips Andover Academy, and received the degree of B.A. at Yale in 1899. He was a member of Psi Upsilon.

He is unmarried.

After graduation from the Forest School Hodge entered the United States Forest Service, remaining until 1908, when he became deputy state forester of California. In 1910 he reentered the Government Service and after some time in the office of silviculture, where he made an exhaustive study of methods of reconnaissance now in use in District 5, is now inspector of fire plans under operation, with headquarters in San Francisco.

He is Progressive in politics and is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Century Club of Washington, D. C., and the University Club of San Francisco.

Ralph S. Hosmer

Business address, Box 207, Honolulu, Hawaii

Residence, 1054 King Street, Honolulu, Hawaii

Ralph S[heldon] Hosmer was born March 4, 1874, in Deerfield, Mass., the son of Rev. George Herbert Hosmer and Julia West (Sheldon) Hosmer. His father was minister of the Unitarian parishes of Deerfield, Bridgewater, Salem and Dorchester, Mass., president of the Unitarian Temperance Society and a member and officer in various educational and charitable organizations. He is a descendant of James Hosmer, one of the first settlers of Concord, Mass., and the grandson on his father's side of Rev. G. Washington Hosmer, D.D., and Hannah Poor (Kendall) Hosmer. His mother was the third daughter of William Sheldon and Catharine (Williams) Sheldon of Deerfield, Mass.

He studied at the Boston Latin School for two years and with private tutors, and from 1891 to 1895 attended the Bussey Institution and Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University. In 1894 he received the degree of B.A.S. from Harvard.

He is unmarried.

From May, 1896, to November, 1898, Hosmer was assistant in the division of soils, United States Department of Agriculture,

Washington, D. C. He was chief of the section of forest replacement, Bureau of Forestry in 1903, and since December, 1903, has been collaborator of the Bureau of Forestry and Forest Service and superintendent of forestry in the territory of Hawaii under the Board of Commissioners of Agriculture and Forestry. His course in the Forest School at Yale was taken during a furlough, and at this time he also gave a course in forest mensuration at the Forest School. He was first treasurer of the Society of American Foresters from 1901 to 1903, a delegate from Hawaii to the Conference of the Governors in May, 1908, and a delegate from Hawaii and speaker at the Seventeenth National Irrigation Congress at Spokane and at the First Conservation Congress at Seattle in 1909. He has been a member of the Chemical Territorial Conservation Commission of Hawaii since 1908 and vice president of the Board of Regents, College of Hawaii, since 1907.

Concerning his various experiences, Hosmer writes: "Summer of 1902 was spent in Maine, in charge of a party working near Moosehead Lake on study of spruce on cut-over land, carried on jointly by the Bureau of Forestry and the State of Maine. In the summer season of 1903 I went on an inspection trip to New England regarding work on white pine, in section of forest replacement, and from July to November 1, I was in Southern California in charge in that part of the state of coöperative forest investigation carried on by the Bureau of Forestry and the State of California. Since January, 1904, I have been in Hawaii; organized the division of forestry in the Board of Agriculture and Forestry; established forest reserve system; systematized forest fire service; conducted campaign of education in forestry and conservation; and pursued policy of advice and assistance to private owners, particularly in tree planting; also, as far as limited funds permitted, have carried on experimental work in the introduction into and trial in Hawaii of trees of economic importance new to the islands. Outside of my regular work I have been interested in the establishment of the College of Hawaii, the local college of agriculture and mechanic arts, of which I have been a regent since its inception; and in various phases of city improvement work. My chief avocations are in connection with affairs of the Harvard Club of Hawaii and the local University Club. I have been much interested, and have helped as I could, in the establishment of the Volcanological Observatory at Kilauea, and in the extension to Hawaii of several branches of government scientific work carried on by various bureaus and departments. In 1906 I made a three months' trip to the Eastern states, during which I read a paper, subsequently published in its Proceedings, before the Society of American Foresters. In 1908 I was again in the East, at the time of the Conference of the Governors, and in 1909 on the Pacific Coast, for the meetings of Spokane and Seattle."

Hosmer is a member of the Unitarian church. In politics he is an "independent Republican, with strong leanings toward Progressiveism." He is a member of the following associations: Society of American Foresters; Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Canadian, Minnesota and American Forestry associations; National Conservation Association; Biological Society, Washington, D. C.; Hawaiian Historical Society; Social Science Society of Honolulu; University Club, Honolulu; Harvard Club of Hawaii (secretary); Harvard Club of Washington and several Alumni associations, including the Yale Club of Hawaii.

He has published: (With E. S. Bruce) A forest working plan for township 40, New York State Forest Preserve, Bull. 30, Div. of For., 1901; (With E. S. Bruce) A forest working plan for townships 5, 6 and 41, Rep. of For., Fish and Game Com. of N. Y., 1903; A study of spruce, on cut-over land, 4th Rep. For. Com. of Maine, 1902; Reports of the Division of Forestry, Ann. Repts. Bd. Coms. of Agric. and For., Hawaii, 1904-10; Report as chairman of Conservation Commission of Hawaii, *Ann. Rep. Div. Roy L. Marston

Skowhegan, Maine

Roy Leon Marston was born September 10, 1877, in Skowhegan, Maine, the son of Charles A. Marston, a representative and senator, and Sarah (Steward) Marston. On his father's side he is of Scotch, and on his mother's of English descent. His father's ancestors have been lumbermen for four generations. He has two sisters: Lola (Marston) Blunt, a graduate of Mills College, Calif., and Mary (Marston) Stewart, a graduate of Mrs. Smallwood's School; and two brothers: Coburn S. Marston, a graduate of Annapolis, and Clair R. Marston, a graduate of the Tome School for Boys, Fort Deposit, Md.

He was prepared at Bloomfield Academy and the Skowhegan High School and received the degree of B.A. from Bowdoin College in 1899. He was in the lumber business for five years before entering the Yale Forest School.

He was married November 29, 1904, in New Haven, Conn., to Miss Julie Parmelee of New Haven, Conn., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Parmelee. They have no children.

Marston has been treasurer and manager of the Coburn Heirs, Inc., since December 26, 1910. He taught at the Yale Forest School until April, 1906. He then became forester to the United States Military Academy. He was later made a member of the academic staff of the United States Military Academy and from 1905 to 1910 was a consulting forester. He was a member of the Tariff Board from 1910 to 1912.

He writes: "Have worked professionally in New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Florida, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Oregon, Washington, California, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Maine, Canada, Mexico, Korea and China in my private practice. Have had charge of all the work on the forest reservation of the United States Military Academy since 1902, in addition to some teaching, lecturing, landscape work and water supply work for the Academy. Made a trip to Hawaii, China, Japan and Korea for professional work in 1908. Had charge of the investigation of the pulp industry, and the survey of available pulp material for the Tariff Board. Made a topographical map and working plan for 225,000 acres belonging to the estate of A. and P. Coburn in Maine, and thereupon organized Coburn Heirs, Inc., of which I am now manager. Have lectured on forestry subjects before Bowdoin College, University of Maine and various other organizations."

In politics Marston is a Republican. He was a delegate to the Republican State Convention in 1908, 1910 and 1912, and Republican candidate for representative to the Legislature in 1912. He is a Mason, a member of the Loyal Order of Moose, the Society of American Foresters, the American Association of Science, the Milburn Club, the Graduates Club of New Haven, University Club of Boston, West Point Army Mess, the Grange and Patrons of Husbandry.

George L. Clothier

Business address, State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash.

Home address, Paxico, Kans.

George Lemon Clothier was born June 30, 1863, in Walkersville, W. Va., the son of Henderson Hall Clothier and Jane (Clark) Clothier. His grandfather, Samuel Clothier, was English and his grandmother, whose maiden name was Crawford, was Scotch. The Clothier family were strong advocates of the Union during the Civil War, and several served in the Union army. On his mother's side he is of German and English descent, his grandfather being George Bogarth Clark and his grandmother Matilda (Stone) Clark. The Clarks were also strong supporters of the Union during the Civil War. He has one sister, Mary Elizabeth (Clothier) Martin, M.D.; and three brothers: Samuel H. Clothier, M.D., Robert W. Clothier, M.S., and Nathan S. Clothier, D.D.S.

He received the degree of B.S. from the Kansas State Agricultural College in 1892. For seven winters before this he had taught in the country schools and had helped on his father's farm. He was a post-graduate student and assistant in botany at the Kansas State Agricultural College from 1895 to 1899, when he received the degree of M.S. He was a member of the Alpha Beta Literary Society and of the Alma Kansas Students' Coöperative Association.

He was married August 14, 1906, in Westmoreland County, Va., to Miss Nellie Antoinette Ames of Westmoreland County, Va., daughter of N. T. Ames and Mary F. (Peck) Ames. His wife's mother was daughter of Professor Peck of Oberlin College, who was appointed minister to the Republic of Haiti by President Lincoln. They have one son, George L. Clothier, Jr., born November 16, 1912.

Clothier was employed in the United States Forest Service from July, 1900, to August, 1905. He spent the years 1905 to 1911 working in the Forest Service and teaching at the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College. Here he was assistant in the horticultural department and later became professor of botany and forestry. In September, 1911, he was appointed professor of forestry at the State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash., which position he now holds.

He writes: "The chief business event of my life since leaving Yale was the purchase of a thousand-acre farm in Kansas in 1905. With but $80 cash in my pocket I obligated myself to pay $13,000 in seven years' time at six and a half per cent. interest. I always have had the greatest possible faith in agricultural land as a safe investment, particularly in a country with such agricultural resources as Kansas. Before my mortgage fell due, I was able to pay it off in full, by selling land at an advance in price and by saving from my salary. To-day I own 1,053 acres of Kansas land free from debt, worth at the lowest market price $35,000. I would not part with the land for $50,000. Faith in Kansas and 'nerve' have enabled me to be the owner of one of the finest stock farms in the United States, where I propose to spend my declining years practicing 'farm forestry,' plant breeding and stock raising. I hope to teach a few years longer, then retire to my farm to practice what I have taught."

Clothier is a member of the Presbyterian church. Of his political ideas he writes: "Was a Republican till high tariff and legislation promoting trusts drove me first to the Democratic party, then to the People's party, then again to the Democratic party under Bryan, and now to the Progressive party under Roosevelt." He was elected to the office of superintendent of public instruction in Wabaun, Kans., by the Populists and Democrats in 1892. He is a member of the American Breeders' Association, the American Forestry Association, the National Geographic Society and of the Gesang and Turn Verein.

He has written many articles for the Kansas Industrialist, Kansas Farmer, Bulletins of the Kansas Experiment Station, Bulletins and Circulars of the Forest Service, Proceedings of the Society of American Foresters, American Forestry Magazine, Bulletins of the Mississippi Experiment Station, American Breeders' Magazine, etc.

Theodore S. Woolsey, Jr.

Business address, Brown Shipley Company, London, England

Home address, Albuquerque, N. Mex.

250 Church Street, New Haven, Conn.

Theodore Salisbury Woolsey, Jr., was born October 2, 1880, in New Haven, Conn., the son of Theodore Salisbury Woolsey, LL.D., Yale '72, professor of international law in the Yale Law School, and Anne Gardner (Salisbury) Woolsey, and is the grandson of Theodore Dwight Woolsey, LL.D., D.D., Yale 1820, president of Yale College from 1846 to 1871, and a descendant of Jonathan Edwards, Yale 1720. A brother, Heathcote Muirson Woolsey, graduated from Yale in 1907.

He was prepared at St. Mark's School at Southboro, Mass., the Pomfret School of Pomfret, Conn., and the Fay School, and graduated from Yale in 1901. While there he was on the editorial board of the Yale Daily News and was a member of Alpha Delta Phi.

He was married March 15, 1908, in Albuquerque, N. Mex., to Miss Ruby Hilsman Pickett of Dawson, Ga., daughter of Thomas Hamilton Pickett, a lawyer and soldier. Mrs. Pickett's maiden name was Davenport. They have four daughters: Elizabeth Davenport Woolsey, born December 25, 1908, in Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Ann Salisbury Woolsey, born June 5, 1910, in Albuquerque; Edith Woolsey, born April 25, 1912, in Lausanne, Switzerland; and Sarah Woolsey, born April 26, 1913, in Paris, France.

Woolsey is an assistant district forester in District 3 with headquarters at Albuquerque, N. Mex. He was appointed to this position in October, 1908. Previous to this he had held successively the positions of assistant forest expert, forest assistant and forest inspector, being appointed to the last on May 15, 1907. During March and April of 1911 he was acting chief of silviculture. He spent the year 1904-05 studying government forestry in Germany, France and India and is at present on leave of absence, studying in Austria and France. He is a member of the Graduate Advisory Board of the Yale Forest School.

He writes: "The windy, sun baked hills in the neighborhood of Marseille (where not denuded) are covered with pin d'alep which during the summer and winter months must exist almost entirely without rain. Even at Grésque at an elevation of 350 meters the rainfall is but 691 millimeters during an average year. Add to the summer droughts a temperature of 25° to 37° centigrade and the vegetative conditions become intolerable. The fellings consequently are light and rarely remove more than 25 per cent. of the volume. The selection system is employed because in the words of the inspector: 'We are afraid of the regular shelterwood fellings because after the parent trees are removed the young crop is exposed to the full force of the wind and drought. To avoid heavy losses during the periodic droughts we employ light selection fellings: if once the ground becomes denuded artificial restocking is a difficult undertaking.'

"And no wonder it is difficult! In the Commune of Marseille (Serie de reboisement de la Gordiale), the government has purchased some 800 hectares of denuded calcareous hills as a demonstration forest and to temper, if possible, the climate, of Marseille by surrounding it with forests. Here a local nursery has been established and systematic reforestation is in progress. It has taken years of study to determine the best methods.

"They sow the pin d'alep in seed spots where the conditions are not too unfavorable and use ball plants (pot method) where seeding results or would result in failures. The sowing and planting is in the fall just before or during the rains. Spring sowing is equally successful until the summer drought starts but during this period the losses are enormous. The seed spots are carefully cultivated and cleared of stones and rocks. The size varies somewhat but on poor ground the spots are .80 by .60 meters and 30 to 35 centimeters deep. They cost from 6 to 12 cents each, and are irregularly spaced 3 to 4 meters apart by a rough quincieux system. When the soil is ready for the seed the surface is 2 to 5 inches below the ground level. This depression collects the water a little during the rains and protects the seedlings against the wind. Perhaps 60 seeds (a small handful) are sown in each spot and are raked into the soil to a depth of 1 to 1½ centimeters. As soon as the sowing is complete a uniform cover of brush is placed on the seed spot and is held down by a good-sized rock. The success of this method is phenomenal. Its chief features are: large well-worked seed spot; heavy sowing to discount certain loss of at least 50 to 90 per cent. of the seedlings which germinate; the brush cover; sowing before or during the rains.

"The same seed spots are prepared for planting and the pin d'alep, after one year in the seed bed and one year in the terra cotta pot, is ball planted after the pot is removed. When the ground is moist the ball of earth around the roots (often caked hard) is loosened to give the roots a better chance. This method is so expensive it is only used where absolutely necessary."

He is an Episcopalian. He is a Mason, a member of the Graduates Club of New Haven, the University Club of New York City and the Societé de Franche Compte et Belfort of Besançon, France.

He has published: Management and natural reproduction of chir pine near Dehra Dun, India, For. and Irr., April, 1906; Bulletin 101. He has written articles for Forest Quarterly, Indian Forester and has delivered lectures before Society of American Foresters. He has in preparation a book, "Forest management in France."

In Maine I was cruising, in California mapping and gathering data on forest resources. My first assignment as forest assistant in the Service was in the Southern Appalachians, where I did much the same work as in California, but in addition collected silvical data and studied logging possibilities as the basis of an outline for forest management. After a year's detail in the Washington office, I was assigned to the Wenaha, the Whitman and the Crater National forests in Washington and Oregon, in turn. My work on the National forests was interrupted by special details in the Washington office and the district office at Portland, and as examiner of applications under the Act of June 11, 1906, in District 6. I have been for two seasons in charge of field parties engaged in making a map and a reconnaissance of the resources of the Crater National Forest in Oregon and much of my time has been spent as acting supervisor of the Crater Forest."

Clinton G. Smith

Logan, Utah

Clinton Gold Smith was born September 16, 1879, in North Cornwall, Conn., the son of Walter Dodge Smith and Mary Louise (Coe) Smith

(died in 1888). His father was a merchant in Litchfield, Conn., prior to 1886, and from 1888 to 1908 was business manager of Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga. Several of his paternal ancestors fought in the Revolution. He has one sister, Mrs. George Knight Howe.

He was prepared at the Litchfield High School and received the degree of B.Agr. from Storrs (now Connecticut) Agricultural College in 1898, where he was second lieutenant in the cadet corps. He entered the Division of Forestry in 1900 and was assigned to various field parties in Georgia, North Carolina and Tennessee, in Minnesota and California, the latter assignment being while he was a student in the Yale Forest School.

He was married February 17, 1909, in Springfield, Ill., to Miss Margaret Alice Young of Springfield, Ill., daughter of Robert Young and Laura Jane (Irwin) Young.

Smith has been forest supervisor in the United States Forest Service since August 1, 1908, with headquarters during that year in Pocatello National Forest, Pocatello, Idaho, and since 1909 in Cache National Forest, Logan, Utah. He entered the Service in 1904 as forest assistant and was engaged in the study of redwoods in California. In 1905-06 he acted as technical assistant in Medicine Bow National Forest, Wyoming, and in 1907-08 held the same position in Weiser and Boise National forests, Idaho. Aside from his prescribed duties, he has been interested in a variety of projects. While at Logan he has been engaged in the establishment of a course of study for forest rangers at the Utah Agricultural College and has delivered a course of lectures there. He has secured gratifying results through the sanitation of Logan River Watershed, bringing the local Board of Health into coöperation with the Forest Service. He is interested in the application of the principles of scientific management to his work, and has prepared two original papers on that subject. He is the author of numerous reports on silvical subjects. In timber reconnaissance he completed a portion of the Weiser Forest and initiated similar work on the Pocatello and Cache National forests. He is a member of the District Investigative Committee of the Forest Service.

He is a member of the Congregational church. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Commercial Boosters Club of Logan, Utah, and is a Mason.

GRADUATES HOLDING CERTIFICATE BUT NOT DEGREE

William H. Kobbé

Business address, Shale, Calif.Home address, 116 South Grand Avenue, Pasadena, Calif.

William Hoffman Kobbé was born January 22, 1881, in Fort Hamilton, N. Y., the son of William August Kobbé and Isabella (Hoffman) Kobbé. His father attended college and mining academies in Germany, served during three years of the Civil War from the position of private to that of captain and afterwards in regular service as officer in all grades to and including major general. He was also military governor of Mindanao and Jolo, Philippine Islands, and retired in 1904. His father's parents were William August Kobbé and Sarah Lord (Sistare) Kobbé of Nassau, Germany, and New York, respectively, and his mother's parents were William Hoffman, brevet major general in the United States Army, and Isabella (Simpson) Hoffman. He has three brothers: Ferdinand Walter Kobbé, captain of the 22d Infantry, U. S. A., Herman Kobbé, 1st U. S. A., and Eric Kobbé, and one sister, Sarah Kobbé.

He was prepared in the public schools of San Francisco, Calif., and attended the Biltmore Forest School before entering the Yale Forest School.

He was married March 6, 1912, in Pasadena, Calif., to Miss Mary Katherine Mather of Pasadena, daughter of Thomas Wylie Mather and Mary Elizabeth Saxe (Maclay) Mather.

Kobbé served as district forester under the civil government of the Philippine Islands from November, 1904, to December, 1907. He was transferred in 1908 to the United States Forest Service as forest assistant and stationed in Arizona for two years. In 1910 he became foreman of the Globe Exploration Company, oil producers, and in the same year was made surveyor of this company. In 1911 he was appointed superintendent of the Rock Oil Company and later in this year received the appointment of superintendent of the Globe Exploration Company. On September 18, 1912, he accepted the position of division superintendent of the General Petroleum Company.

He writes: "Had charge of the provinces of Batanzas, Tayabas, Albay, Sorsogon, Camarines Norte, Camarines Sur and the little-known island of Mindoro in the Philippines and did considerable exploring and mapping during the three years spent there. Saw something of Japan and took the opportunity to travel by land from Nagasaki to Kobe. Upon returning to the United States spent nearly two years in different parts of Arizona, but found government service there distasteful and for the most part poorly paid. Have been in the oil business in California for nearly three years, starting as a 'roustabout' and having held about every position up to superintendent. The work is interesting, out-of-doors, mostly mechanical and in very congenial surroundings."

He is a member of the Episcopal church and in politics is a Progressive Republican. He is a member of the California Academy of Sciences, of the American Ornithologists Union, the Cooper Ornithological Club, the Overland Club of Pasadena, Calif., and the Yale Alumni Association of Southern California.

Jacob J. Levison

Business address, Department of Parks, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Residence, 526 Cleveland Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Prospect Park, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Jacob Joshua Levison was born January 20, 1881, in Riga, Russia, the son of Julius Levison and Esther (Apte) Levison. The family resides in Russia and the members are chiefly rabbis, teachers and well known philanthropists.

He came to the United States in 1893, entered the public schools of New York and was graduated in 1896 with two medals. He then studied art at Cooper Union but later gave this up to allow more time for the work at college. He spent eight years in connection with the social work at the University Settlement, where he taught out-door athletics. He received the degree of B.A. at the College of the City of New York in 1902.

He is unmarried.

Levison acted as forest assistant for one year and then became a forester in the employ of the City of New York, having charge of the department of Brooklyn and Queens. Since 1908 he has also served as a staff lecturer at the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and for the New York City Board of Education, and since 1909 as forester of the American Association for Planting and Preservation of City Trees. He is a member of the executive committee of the Long Island Agricultural Education Association and of the botany department of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences; has lectured at the Yale Forest School on ornamental and shade trees, and has been called by many cities to organize tree commissions for them, lecture and start them in their work on the care and planting of trees.

He writes: "My chief interest during the past six years has centered around the city tree problem of the country. Seven years ago I saw the need of championing forestry among the city dwellers and to put the tree problems of our parks on a scientific footing. It was all in the hands of untrained men. Brooklyn and Queens Park departments offered the opportunity for demonstrating the possibilities of such work and from that very moment I had to fight against all sorts of odds to introduce new methods and get scientific tree care recognized. We are still spending nearly $4,000,000 annually on parks in New York City and only a very small fraction of this goes to tree work. But now we are getting more and more interest in the trees and the people are fast becoming educated to it. It had to be done by systematic and constant effort in writing, lecturing, talking from the platform, defying politicians, etc. I traveled to other cities and did the same there and now we have many cities awake to it. I am now especially interested in seeing municipal forests established in cities and to have these displace the common, conventional and extremely expensive formal park."

Levison is a member of the Ethical Culture Society of Brooklyn, Mason Lodge, Brooklyn Entomological Society, Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, American Association of Park Superintendents, New York Academy of Sciences, American Forestry Association and the American Tree Planting Association of Brooklyn.

Home address, Ottumwa, Iowa

William Herbert Mast was born August 16, 1879, in Ottumwa, Wapello County, Iowa, the son of Jacob Gehman Mast, a pioneer and highly respected citizen of Ottumwa (died January 13, 1909), and Frances E. (Miller) Mast, the youngest of a family of eight daughters and two sons of Thomas and Jane (Hunter) Miller of Keosauqua, Iowa. Jacob G. Mast was a son of Isaac Mast and a grandson of Bishop Jacob Mast, who emigrated from Switzerland to America in 1750 and settled at Northkill, Berks County, Pa. William H. Mast has three brothers: Frank Miller Mast, Charles Fulton Mast and Thomas Walter Mast, B.Agr. Iowa State College '97.

He was born and reared on a farm near Ottumwa, Iowa, attended the country school and in 1893 entered the high school in the small town of Agency in the same county. He was graduated in 1897 and entered Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Agriculture in 1900.

He was married June 28, 1910, in Ottumwa, Iowa, to Miss Mary Ethelda Morrison, Iowa State College '02, of Seattle, Wash., daughter of John R. Morrison and Mary Coffeen Morrison.

Mast entered the United States Forest Service upon his graduation from Iowa State College in 1900. His first position as a forest assistant was in charge of Halsey Nursery in connection with the Nebraska National Forest, and he was supervisor of this forest from 1908 to 1910. In 1910 he was in the office of planting in Denver; 1910-11, in charge of Monument Nursery, Pike National Forest, and in 1911-12, forest assistant and acting supervisor of Gunnison National Forest. With W. J. Duppert he has recently taken over the operation of the Davenport (Iowa) Nursery, formerly owned by Nichols & Lorton.

He writes: "I have developed the systems for nursery and planting work as practiced on the Nebraska and Kansas, and to some extent, on the Pike National Forest. This has included work with methods of seeding, mulching, shading, watering, storing, transplanting, digging, packing and planting. In most cases old systems have been modified or, in a number of cases, new ones instituted. Have devised the Mast Transplanting Tools, which are now being patented, also the Mast Forest Trencher.

"During 1909, 1910 and 1911, I was a special lecturer of the department of forestry, Nebraska University, covering the subjects of 'nursery' and 'planting' work, and in 1912, a special lecturer at the summer school of the Colorado State Normal School.

"Have done extensive work in seed collecting, having gathered coniferous seed in Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico and Idaho. Have prepared a circular (as yet unpublished) for the Forest Service on the subject of 'Collecting Seed of Rocky Mountain Conifers.' Was the first in the Forest Service to make use of a churn or slatted box shaker to remove seed from cones."

He is a Presbyterian, a member of the Society of American Foresters and the Equitable Fraternal Union.

He has published: Forest tree seed collecting, For. and Irr., July, 1904; Nursery and planting tools, Am. For., May, 1912; New tools for transplanting conifers, For. Quart., March, 1912.

Ferdinand A. Silcox

Business address, Forest Service, Missoula, Mont.

Residence, 529 Cleveland Street, Missoula, Mont.

Ferdinand Augustus Silcox was born December 25, 1882, in Columbus, Ga., the son of Ferdinand Augustus Silcox, president of the Charleston Cotton Mills, and Carrie Olivia (Spear) Silcox. His father was of English descent and his mother of Dutch and French origin.

He was prepared at the Charleston High School and received the degree of B.S. at the College of Charleston, S. C., in 1903 with honors in chemistry and sociology. He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

He was married March 4, 1908, in Charleston, S. C., to Miss Marie Louise Thatcher of Charleston, S. C.

Silcox is a district forester, in charge of District 1, with headquarters at Missoula, Mont. He writes: "During summer of 1904 I worked in West Virginia making a working plan under Ralph Hawley for the U. S. Coal & Coke Company, approximately 60,000 acres. Passed civil service exams in 1905 and was assigned to the Leadville Forest in Colorado. For three months I worked as ranger, forest assistant and somewhat in the capacity of supervisor. The organization at that time had not crystallized and one man had charge of the Pike, Leadville and Holy Cross forests from Denver. In September, 1905, I was placed in charge of the Holy Cross Forest as acting supervisor to establish the administration and get things going. This forest was the center of bitter opposition to the Service and it was here that the famous Fred Light case first came up. After getting things under way I was sent to the San Juan and Montezuma with headquarters at Durango to get the administration under way. These forests included together about 3,000,000 acres, and when I arrived in early January, 1906, nothing had been done. I stayed until April and was then sent to Montana with Mr. E. A. Sherman. I stayed two weeks and was called to Washington to serve in the capacity of district forester for District 1. This under the old scheme was in no way similar to the present position. It was an assignment to handle general omnibus letters for signature of Washington office administration officers. Left Washington as assistant forest inspector and went to New Mexico to look over the Portales with the result of eliminating the entire forest. Came back to Montana in the spring of 1907 as forest inspector and put the administration on the newly created cabinet. With Redington, Class of 1904, worked up the plan of re-districting the forests in Montana and Idaho. From 1907 to December 1, 1908, was a general inspection officer. With the creation of the district office at Missoula for District 1, I was appointed assistant district forester, which title was changed later to associate district forester upon district forester W. B. Greeley being called into Washington as assistant forester. I was made district forester July 1, 1911, which position I now hold."

He is a member of the Society of American Foresters.

CLASS OF 1906

GRADUATES HOLDING DEGREE OF M.F.

J. Howard Allison

Business address, Care of College of Forestry, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.

Residence, 2116 Carter Avenue, St. Paul, Minn.
Granby, Conn.

John Howard Allison was born September 25, 1883, in East Granby, Conn., the son of John Alexander Allison, a farmer and holder of various town offices, and Mary Elizabeth (Mack) Allison. On his father's side he is Scotch, and on his mother's Irish. He has one brother, Nathan K. Allison, who attended Trinity College in Hartford in 1911.

He was prepared at the district schools in East Granby and Granby and at the Hartford High School in Hartford, Conn., and graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1905.

He was married September 6, 1911, in New Haven, Conn., to Miss Mabel Ann Shepard of Hamden, Conn., daughter of Henry Shepard and Alice M. (Warner) Shepard. They have a son, John Howard Allison, Jr., born April 19, 1913.

From July 16, 1906, until January 1, 1909, Allison held the position of forest assistant, assigned to general administration work on the Coconino (old San Francisco Mountains) National Forest until April 1, 1908, and from July 1, 1908, until January 1, 1909, he was in charge of the Coconino National Forest reconnaissance party. From then until August 15, 1911, he was inspecting reconnaissance work or in charge of field parties in District 3. He says: "During this time I prepared the Coconino Working Plan (area now embraced in the Coconino-Tusayan), which I believe I could now greatly improve. I do not now believe the Service is following the right 'tack' to get a working plan which produces 'plans' of value to supervisors. Since February 1, 1912, I have been in charge of reconnaissance and since June 15, 1912, also in charge of the office of 'Geography' in District 3. During this time I have gathered the data for an accurate topographic and type map of the Sitgreaves, which I believe the Service will publish as a three color map late this fall. I have other forest maps in the process of compilation." He resigned from the Service in January, 1913, to take up teaching at the College of Forestry at St. Paul, Minn.

Concerning his travels, Allison writes: "My travels, outside of trips in connection with my duties in the Service, have been confined to brief pleasure trips to California (1906, 1909 and 1911), the Yellowstone National Park (1909) and through the Canadian Rockies along the Canadian Pacific Railroad (1911)."

He is a Congregationalist, and in politics is a Progressive Republican. From July, 1907, to July, 1910, he was a private in the Arizona National Guard.

Arthur B. Recknagel

Business address, Department of Forestry, Cornell University,
Ithaca, N. Y.

Home address, 223 East Nineteenth Street, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Arthur Bernhard Recknagel was born December 15, 1883, in Brooklyn, N. Y., the son of John Hermann Recknagel, a commission merchant and president of the American Spice Trade Association, and Marie (Westermann) Recknagel (died May 1, 1890). He is the grandson on his father's side of Carl L. Recknagel and Elise (Löhning) Recknagel of Brooklyn, N. Y., and on his mother's side of Bernhard Westermann and Johanna (Brasch) Westermann of New York City. He has three brothers: Carl L. Recknagel, Jr., John H. Recknagel, Jr., and Harold S. Recknagel, Yale '98 and LL.B. Columbia '01; and two sisters: Viola Recknagel and Friede Recknagel.

He was prepared at Bedford Military Academy, Great Neck, L. I., and Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, N. Y., and in 1904 graduated from Yale College, where he was a member of Sigma Xi and of the Orations Baseball team and was the recipient of the Scott Prize in German.

He was married August 25, 1909, in Albuquerque, N. Mex., to Miss Mary Thomas Miller of Harrisonburg, Va., daughter of Lewis Caperton Miller and Ada (Pilson) Miller. They have one son, Bernhard Westermann Recknagel, born June 11, 1912, in Dresden, Germany.

Recknagel is professor of forestry in the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., where he teaches forest management, forest utilization and wood technology. He has held this position since February 1, 1913. He writes: "On entering the Forest Service as forest assistant in 1906 my first assignment was to Santa Fé, N. Mex., where I was engaged in timber sale examinations on the Jemez, Carson and Pecos National forests. Transferred in November to the Beaver National Forest, Utah, for similar work, and again to the Coconino National Forest, Flagstaff, Ariz., in December, where I remained on growth studies (western yellow pine), marking and estimates until the end of June, 1907, when I was ordered in to Washington for timber sale detail. In September and again in December I was in Georgia on congressional tours and in Tennessee on a woodlot examination. In January I was made acting chief of the reorganized section of reconnaissance, office of management. This appointment was confirmed in February and in April I started on a four months' trip to organize the new field work. This trip carried me to New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and Washington. I returned to Washington, D. C., over the Canadian Pacific from Vancouver to Montreal. During August I was in Alabama on congressional tours and also conferred with the governors of Alabama and of Georgia as to Service coöperation with these states. In December I left Washington to take up my duties in District 3 as assistant chief of silviculture, remaining there for nearly three years or until October, 1911, when I sailed for Europe on a year's leave of absence to study forest conditions abroad.

"The fall semester I enrolled at the Forst Akademie at Eberswalde, near Berlin, then I traveled through Germany, France, Switzerland and Austria. I became especially interested in the management: i. e., in the working plan practice of the various countries, and, on settling at Dresden for some months, specialized on this subject, having the Forst Akademie at Tharandt conveniently near.

"Again and again it has been brought home to me that the experiences we are making and the stages through which we are passing are nothing new but merely the inexorable repetition of history modified by changed economic conditions. But great as has been the progress made by European nations in the science of forestry, it has not resulted in stagnation. New ideas and improvements on old methods are constantly being introduced and all this makes for progress towards the ideal forestry which is, apparently, as far removed from realization in Europe as it is in America.

"This progress of present day forestry in Europe is best exemplified, it seems to me, by the turning away from pure stands and artificial regeneration toward mixed stands and natural regeneration. Throughout Prussia the beech is being coaxed back among the Scotch pine stands. Saxony, where spruce was raised in pure stands for successive generations, has realized that this repetition of the same crop, however profitable, soon exhausts the soil.

"Another striking example of this progress is Professor Wagner's 'Blendersaumschlag' or Border Cuttings, whereby he regenerates naturally under shelter working from the northern side, where is the maximum of sun and wind protection, towards the southern side of the stand.

"In methods of artificial regeneration what struck me particularly is the abandoning of the many complex planting instruments in favor of that simplest of all tools, the mattock. No more jamming of the seedling into the earth with crumpled, often injured root system, but a 'natural,' normal planting by hand in a mattock-made hole.

"Finally I must mention the tendency away from large cutting areas with their attendant increased dangers of fire, drought, insects, fungi, wind, etc., towards smaller cutting areas and more of them: more points of attack as initial points in a well-planned cutting series progressing against the prevailing wind direction."

Recknagel is an Episcopalian, and in politics is a Republican. He was at one time a member of Company C, First Regiment of Arizona Militia. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters.

He has published: Practical fire protection, For. Quart., 1906, reprinted in Forest Leaves, Pa., 1906; Economics of protection, Forest Leaves, 1906; The new reconnaissance, Proc. Soc. Am. Foresters, 1908, reprinted as pamphlet, Yale Pub. Ass'n, 1909; Marking in practice, For. Quart., 1909; Progress of reconnaissance, *For. GRADUATE HOLDING CERTIFICATE BUT NOT DEGREE

Rudo L. Fromme

Olympia, Wash.

Rudo Lorenzo Fromme was born July 10, 1882, in Saint Paris, Ohio, the son of Frank W. Fromme, advertising manager for some years for Gaar Scott & Company (manufacturers of threshing machines) of Richmond, Ind., and Stella L. (Riker) Fromme. On his father's side he is of German and Spanish and on his mother's of German and Scotch ancestry. He has one brother, Fred Denton Fromme, B.S. South Dakota State Agricultural College '11, and one sister, Nola Katheryn Fromme, B.S. Ohio State University '05.

He was prepared at the high school in Richmond, Ind., and during the year 1901-02 attended Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind. In 1905 he received the degree of B.S. from Ohio State University, where he was a member of Alpha Gamma Rho. He spent three months in the summer of 1905 as forest student.

He was married May 20, 1908, in Priest River, Idaho, to Miss Ruby Ellen Gowanlock of Priest River, daughter of John A. Gowanlock and Mederise Gowanlock.

Fromme has been supervisor of the Olympic National Forest with headquarters in Olympia, Wash., since September 1, 1912. On August 16, 1912, he wrote: "Since leaving Yale I have traveled but very little excepting on official business connected with the Forest Service. My first assignment after leaving Washington, D. C., was to the old Priest River National Forest in Northern Idaho as forest assistant, where I spent the summer of 1906 on and in the vicinity of Priest Lake, mostly fighting fires, carrying tools and supplies by row or sail boat up the lake and then packing them back into the mountains on my back. During the fall and winter I estimated timber, and later put through the first large commercial sales on that, now the Kaniksu, forest. In August, 1907, when Supervisor McConnell was dismissed, I was placed in charge of the Kaniksu and my headquarters changed to Newport, Wash. On May 20, 1908, I married my present wife, who was then residing with her parents in Priest River, Idaho, and in the latter part of September, same year, we disposed of most of our newly purchased furniture in order that I might accept a new assignment as chief of operation in the San Francisco district office, obtaining a temporary detail of six or seven weeks in Washington, D. C., while en route. While in San Francisco, seven months, I had occasion to visit almost all of the forest headquarters and some of the forests proper of California, accepting an assignment as supervisor of the Klamath National Forest to supersede acting superintendent Harley in July, 1909. After one year in charge of the Siskiyou National Forest in Southwestern Oregon, I am now to leave in two or three days to take charge of the Olympic National Forest of Western Washington, a more important forest and a bigger job."

In politics he is a "Progressive, generally Republican." He is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Geological Society, the American Forestry Association and the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

Sta.; Forest conditions in southwestern Mississippi, Bull., Miss. State Geol. Sur. He has also written miscellaneous articles in magazines and lumber journals.

Bartle T. Harvey

Business address, United States Bureau of Entomology, 265½ Fifth Street, Portland, Ore.

Home address, 46 Main Street, Orono, Maine

Bartle Trott Harvey was born November 1, 1882, in Fayetteville, Ark., the son of Francis Le Roy Harvey, B.S. Iowa State College '72, M.S. '86 and Ph.D. '90, and Addie Lillian (Bartle) Harvey, who did three years special work at Iowa State College. His father was professor of mathematics at Humboldt College, Iowa, in 1874, professor of chemistry and natural history at the University of Arkansas from 1875 to 1885, and professor of biology at the University of Maine from 1887 to 1900; he has written many scientific articles, discovered about fifty forms new to science in fossil plants, flowering plants, fungi, algae and insects, and there are six plant forms and one insect form named after him. He is the grandson of Daniel Harvey and Arminda (Wilkins) Harvey, daughter of William Wilkins. His mother's parents were Ransom Bartle, a descendant of Colonel Peter Bulkeley, founder of Concord, Mass., of Joseph Loomis, founder of Windsor, Conn., and the Bacons of Middletown, Conn., and Martha (Newkirk) Bartle, a descendant of the Von Nieuenkirchs of Holland and the Stuarts of Scotland. He has two brothers: Le Roy Harris Harvey, M.S. University of Maine '01 and Ph.D. University of Chicago '05, and Willis Lake Harvey, B.S. University of Maine; and two sisters: Florence Evelyn Harvey, a special student three years at the University of Maine and a graduate of the Boston Children's Hospital, and Ruth Josephine Harvey.

He was prepared at the Orono High School and in 1905 was graduated with the degree of B.S. from the University of Maine, where he also did special work in diseases of trees. At college he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta. Before entering the Yale Forest School he was engaged for some time in tree trimming and landscape gardening, worked in woods, mills, followed surveying, mapping and estimating of timber, and collected and sold insects and plants.

He is unmarried.

Harvey was appointed entomological assistant in the United States Bureau of Entomology, Portland, Ore., on August 28, 1912. He was at different times forester of the Great Northern Paper Company of Bangor, Maine, forest assistant in the United States Forest Service, salesman for the Cree Publishing Company, Seattle, Wash., and for the Tunnison Map Company of Chicago, Ill. He has been deputy forest fire warden, deputy forest fish and game warden and licensed guide of the State of Maine and special deputy sheriff of Multnomah County, Portland, Ore.

He writes: "My collections were chiefly of fungi, mosses, dragon flies and spring tails. The ranges of certain species were extended and new species in fungi and spring tails were discovered. Made four expeditions on marine biological collecting trips along the coast of Maine for the state." He has contributed a collection of the woods of Maine, also minerals, animals, birds, insects, tree diseases, etc., to the museum of the University of Maine.

He is a member of the Congregational church. In politics he has no party choice, but believes in the right man for the right place. He also believes in equal suffrage. He is a representative of the United Press Syndicate and a member of the Maine Forestry Association, the American Forestry Association, the National League for Medical Freedom and the Maine State Hunters Association.

He has written articles on forestry for the Bangor (Maine) Daily Commercial and Morning Oregonian, Portland, Ore. In 1912 he made contributions to the list of dialect expressions in the annual publication of the American Dialect Society.

Charles S. Judd

Business address, 409 Beck Building, Portland, Ore.

Residence, 734 East Main Street, Portland, Ore.

Forest Service, Portland, Ore.

Charles Sheldon Judd was born July 11, 1881, in Honolulu, Hawaii, the son of Albert Francis Judd, LL.D., Yale '62, and Agnes Hall (Boyd) Judd. His father graduated from Harvard Law School in 1864, and was given the degree of LL.D. by Yale in 1894. He also was secretary of the Constitutional Convention of the Hawaiian Kingdom in 1864, attorney general in 1873, associate justice of the supreme court of Hawaii in 1874, chief justice from 1881 until his death in 1900 and chancellor of the Hawaiian Kingdom until it ceased to exist. He is the grandson of Dr. G. P. Judd, who went to Hawaii as a medical missionary in 1827 and afterwards was adviser to Hawaiian kings, and a descendant of Thomas Judd, who emigrated from Kent, England, to Cambridge, Mass., in 1634. His mother was the daughter of James R. Boyd, a Congregational minister in Geneva, N. Y., and also chaplain and professor at Hamilton College, principal of Maplewood Institute at Pittsfield, Mass., and head teacher at Abbott Collegiate Institute, New York City. He has two sisters, Agnes E. Judd and Sophie B. Judd, and seven brothers: Albert Francis Judd, Yale '97 and '00 L.; James Robert Judd, Yale '97 and M.D. College of Physicians and Surgeons '01; Allan W. Judd; Henry Pratt Judd, Yale '01; Gerrit P. Judd, D.V.S. University of Pennsylvania; and Lawrence M. Judd. A cousin, George R. Carter, graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1888.

He was prepared at the Punahou School, Hawaiian Islands, and graduated from Yale College in 1905, where he was a member of the Sophomore Football Team and of the Cap and Gown Committee and received a second colloquy appointment in his Junior year. He was also a member of Alpha Delta Phi, Elihu Club and Sigma Xi.

He was married June 11, 1910, in New Haven, Conn., to Miss Louise Luquiens of New Haven, daughter of Professor Jules Luquiens, Ph.D. Yale 1873, head of the French department at Yale (died August 23, 1899), and Emma (Clark) Luquiens. She has two brothers: Huc-Mazelet Luquiens, Yale '02, and Frederick Bliss Luquiens, Yale '97.

During the summer of 1906 Judd returned to Honolulu after a five years' absence. He worked for the Board of Commissioners of Agriculture and Forestry of the Territory of Hawaii for seven weeks in Honolulu and on the island of Kauai, taking measurements of growth and volume in six hundred acres of planted forest trees. He writes: "Immediately upon graduation from the School I entered the Forest Service as forest assistant in management and started west with my assistant chief, stopping off at the Medicine Bow Forest, Wyoming. In California we visited the Diamond Mountain and Plumas forests, attended the Irrigation Congress at Sacramento, and visited the Shasta Forest. I was then stationed on the Diamond Mountain from September, 1907, to April, 1908, where I was engaged in the administration of two large timber sales, marking western yellow pine for cutting, and scaling logs. I also surveyed ranger stations and claims and, after the snow came, drew maps in the supervisor's office. In April, 1908, I was called into the Washington office, where during a long hot summer I became thoroughly imbued with the timber sale policy and procedure of the Forest Service. At the time of the redistricting in December, 1908, I was promoted and assigned to the district office at Portland, Ore., as assistant chief of silviculture. During the summer of 1909 I inspected the Snoqualmie National Forest, Washington, covering a large area of forested mountains in the Cascades east of Seattle. In thirty days I traveled on foot 340 miles, visiting all of the operations on the forest and often alone, but more often with a ranger, slept out under a giant hemlock or huge Douglas fir overnight and lived for the most part on trout and wild blackberries. In October, 1909, I went to Los Angeles with my mother and was best man at the wedding of my brother Henry. In December of the same year I estimated timber on snowshoes on the Whitman Forest in eastern Oregon. In the spring of 1910 I inspected timber sales and seed sowing operations on the Oregon National Forest near Mt. Hood.

"In May, 1910, I went east to New Haven, Conn., where I was married on June 11. On the honeymoon trip west we stopped off at Salem, Ohio, and Cashmere, Wash., visiting relatives, before returning to Portland. During August, 1910, while the forest fires were at their worst, visited most of the National forests in Washington in a seed collecting campaign. In the fall of the same year inspected seed sowing operations on the Olympic, Columbia, and Oregon forests. In February, 1911, lectured on timber sales at the Ranger School of the University of Washington at Seattle. While inspecting timber sales on the Colville Forest in northeastern Washington in June, 1911, received the offer of a position in Honolulu from the Governor of Hawaii. On July 25, 1911, entered upon the duties of commissioner of public lands and president and executive officer of the Board of Commissioners of Agriculture and Forestry, Territory of Hawaii.

"During September, 1911, made the circuit of the Island of Hawaii on an official automobile trip with the Governor and Attorney General of the Territory and on the way back to Honolulu stopped off for some goat hunting on the almost uninhabited desert island of Kahoolawe. As president of the Board of Agriculture and Forestry, began a campaign for the control of a serious infestation of the Mediterranean fruit fly and was instrumental in passing a dog quarantine regulation to prevent rabies from getting to the Islands.

"Returned to Portland, Ore., during March, 1912, and resumed duties with the Forest Service as assistant district forester, District 6."

He was a messenger in the Citizens' Guard of Hawaii during the revolution of 1905 and a trooper in the Mounted Reserves, Republic of Hawaii, at the time of annexation to the United States in 1908, and served in the same capacity as a quarantine guard at Makapuu Pass, Oahu, for two months in 1900 during the epidemic of bubonic plague.

Judd is a member of the Central Union Church (Congregational) of Honolulu. He is a Republican, and is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, the Oregon Conservation Association and the University Club of Honolulu.

He has published: The sandalwood tree in Hawaii, For. and Irr., April, 1905; Summer session of the Yale Forest School, For. and Irr., March, 1906; Seed distribution in Hawaii, Haw'n Agric. and Forester, Jan., 1907; A mesquite grove in Hawaii, For. and Irr., April, 1907; Efficacy of goats in clearing brush lands in the Northwest, Proc. Soc. Am. Foresters, VI, No. 1, 1911; Western red cedar, The Timberman, Portland, Ore., Oct., 1910; Portland needs an arboretum—Open letter to the Oregon Daily Journal, Portland, Ore., April 19, 1911; Two minor wood industries, For. Quart., X, No. 2, 1912.

Francis B. Kellogg

Business address, United States Forest Service, Beck Building, Portland, Ore.

Home address, 98 El Camino Real, Berkeley, Calif.

Francis Bentley Kellogg was born August 28, 1879, in Anaheim, Calif., the son of George Herbert Kellogg, B.A. Kenyon College '68, and Fay (Chase) Kellogg. He is the grandson of Rev. Ezra B. Kellogg, D.D., who served in the War of 1812, and Anna (Thompson) Kellogg, and the great-grandson of Jason Kellogg. On his mother's side he is the grandson of Rev. Dudley Chase, U. S. A., appointed chaplain in the regular army by Lincoln, and Sarah Griffeth (Wells) Chase, and the great-grandson of the Rt. Rev. Philander Chase, Episcopal bishop of Ohio and Illinois and founder of Kenyon College, and Hon. Bezaleel Wells, founder of Canton, Wellsville and Steubenville, Ohio. He has one sister, Grace Wells Kellogg.

He was prepared at the Lowell High School and Boone's University Academy and in 1905 graduated from the University of California with the degree of B.S. He was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Skull and Keys.

He is unmarried.

Kellogg entered the United States Forest Service July 1, 1907, as forest assistant on the Sierra South National Forest, California, and later was transferred to the Rainier Forest, Washington. He then became timber cruiser for the Department of the Interior, Oregon. He again was appointed forest assistant in timber sales, District 6, and after this deputy forest supervisor of Cascade National Forest, Oregon. He is at present forest assistant with headquarters in Portland, Ore.

He is a Progressive. He is a member of the University Club of Portland, Ore., and the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

He has published: The Problem of the dune, Calif. Jrl. Tech., 1904.

Kingsley R. MacGuffey

Parkdale, Ore.

Kingsley Rich MacGuffey was born January 5, 1880, in Cincinnati, Ohio, the son of Alexander Hamilton MacGuffey, LL.D., a lawyer of the firm of MacGuffey, Morrell & Strunk, and Caroline Virginia (Rich) MacGuffey, a niece of Maria Mitchell, professor of astronomy at Vassar College, and a descendant of John Rich, first Earl of Warwick, England. His father is a non-graduate of Miami University, having been a student there in 1832 and was dean of the Cincinnati College of Law. On his father's side he is of Scotch and on his mother's of American descent. He had three brothers: Telford, Winthrop, C.E. Harvard '95, and Harold, all deceased; and two sisters: Agnes (deceased) and Margaret, who graduated from the Albany State Library School in 1896. An uncle, Frederick Packard, graduated from Yale in 1848.

He was prepared at the Taft School, Watertown, Conn., and graduated from Yale in 1905, where he was Dwight Hall organist and a member of the Boys' Club Committee.

He is unmarried.

MacGuffey is president of the Red Cross Orchard Company of Parkdale, Ore. In addition to managing his ranch there, he is also in the employ of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company of San Francisco. He entered their traffic department in February, 1913.

Immediately after graduation from the Forest School in 1907, he entered the United States Forest Service, spending the months of July and August making a study of hickory in Tennessee, and from then until November he was stationed in Washington, D. C. From there he was sent to Missoula, Mont., as forest assistant. He held this position until June, 1908, when he was given a furlough, and in company with Nils B. Eckbo, M.F. '07, took a trip around the world, visiting Japan, China, Siberia and the principal European countries. In January, 1909, he returned to this country and reentered the Forest Service, remaining until June, 1909, when he resigned. He spent the summer in England, returning in December of this same year. In company with Russell Gordon Pond, of the Class of 1906, Biltmore Forest School, he took up the business of fruit-growing, incorporating the Red Cross Apple Company, of which he is president.

MacGuffey is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Commercial and University clubs of Hood River and the Upper Hood River Progressive Association.

Clyde S. Martin

Business address, Elma Camp, No. 1, Saginaw Timber Company, Aberdeen, Wash.

Residence, 304 West Third Street, Aberdeen, Wash.

Clyde Sayers Martin was born September 19, 1884, in Waynesburg, Pa., the son of Charles Alexander Martin, one of the first teachers in the Calcutta Boys School, India, and Florence Adelaide (Sayers) Martin. He is of Scotch-English ancestry. He has one brother, Edwin Ezra Martin.

He received the degree of B.S. in 1905 from De Pauw University, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi.

He was married June 30, 1909, in Rushville, Ill., to Miss Florence Alexander Roach of Rushville, daughter of Herschel B. Roach and Helen (Chadsey) Roach. They have one son, Charles Alexander Martin, born May 9, 1910, in Aberdeen, Wash.

From 1907 to 1912 Martin was with the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, where he acted as fire warden, inspector, compassman, timekeeper, logging engineer, trespass man and topographer. Since July 10, 1912, he has held the position of logging engineer with the Saginaw Timber Company.

He writes: "My work here has grown entirely apart from forestry as a profession in itself. It is rather logging engineering in its broader sense; going on the theory that after all is said and done logging is a problem of transportation primarily. In this country of large timber our operations have developed on such a large scale that the larger companies have found pressing need for a systematization of methods and accounting. A technically trained man working from a basis of thorough understanding of present methods and conditions is preëminently the man for this work. It takes years of hard preparatory work under actual logging conditions to fit a man for such a position, but the future promises great things for the man who will persevere until he is a recognized authority on scientific logging. And it is the forester working from the inside, with a full knowledge of actual conditions who can best say to what extent forestry may be practiced by the logger. Briefly, these are the lines upon which I am working and by which I hope to show that there is a field for the technical man in private work."

He is a member of the Methodist church and in politics is a Progressive Republican. He is a member of the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

David T. Mason

United States Forest Service, Missoula, Mont.

David Townsend Mason was born March 11, 1883, in Newark, N. J., the son of William B. R. Mason, postmaster of Bound Brook, N. J., a newspaper publisher, manager of a water company and president of the Building Loan Association, and Rachel Manning (Townsend) Mason. He is a descendant on his father's side of Captain John Mason, who with two brothers settled in Massachusetts in 1634. One of these brothers operated the first sawmill in New England, on the Piscataquis River in Maine. His mother's ancestors came to New Jersey in colonial times, some of them having land of royal grant, part of which is still in the family. He has two brothers: Fred R. Mason, B.S. Rutgers '05 and M.F. Yale '11, and H. F. R. Mason.

He was prepared at the Plainfield (N. J.) High School and received the degree of B.S. from Rutgers College in 1905 and in 1908 the degree of M.S. At college he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Chi Psi.

He was married October 4, 1911, in Missoula, Mont., to Miss Georgia Evelyn Polleys of Missoula, Mont., daughter of Edward H. Polleys and Edna (Woodcock) Polleys.

Since graduating from the Yale Forest School, Mason has been employed in the United States Forest Service, where he has held the following positions: forest assistant, Montezuma National Forest, Colorado, and Washington, D. C., July 1, 1907, to June 30, 1908; assistant chief of timber sales, Washington, D. C., July 1, 1908, to November 30, 1908; assistant chief of silviculture, District 1, Missoula, Mont., December 1, 1908, to July 1, 1909; assistant district forester, District 1, Missoula, Mont., July 1, 1909, to July 1, 1910; forest supervisor, Deer-lodge National Forest, Montana, July 1, 1910, to July 1, 1912; and assistant district forester, District 1, Missoula, Mont., July 1, 1912, to the present time. In January, February and March of 1911 and 1912 he was detailed to give work in connection with short courses in forestry at the University of Montana. He has in preparation a bulletin on the lodgepole pine in which many new and interesting facts are set forth.

In politics he is a "Progressive—Independent." He is a member of the Society of American Foresters and the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

Louis S. Murphy

Business address, United States Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

Home address, 4 Thurston Street, Winter Hill Station, Boston, Mass.

Louis Sutcliffe Murphy was born August 10, 1876, in Boston, Mass., the son of Joseph Henry Murphy and Elizabeth Marion (Atkins) Murphy. He is the grandson on his father's side of Michael Thomas Murphy, born in Ireland in 1797, and Eleanor Jane (O'Neal) Murphy, born in Canterbury, England, in 1806, who were married in Halifax, N. S., Canada, in 1831. His mother's foster parents were Sophronia Elizabeth Atkins and Caleb Upham Atkins.

He was prepared at the Forster Grammar School, Somerville, Mass., and at the Boston English High School and from July, 1895, to September, 1897, was a clerk in the insurance office of O'Brien & Russell, Boston. In 1901 he received the degree of B.S. from Tufts College, where he was a member of Delta Tau Delta. From 1901 to 1905 he was employed as chemist in the North Packing & Provision Company of Somerville, Mass.

He is unmarried.

Murphy has been a forest examiner in the United States Forest Service since January, 1910. He was forest assistant from July, 1907, to January, 1910. From November, 1911, to May, 1912, he was in Porto Rico studying its forest problems and formulating a forest policy for the Island as a whole and for Luquillo National Forest.

He writes: "Porto Rico presents unusual interest for the forester just now, for, unless all signs fail, both the Forest Service and the Government of Porto Rico will soon need one or more trained foresters to direct the forestry operations which each seems destined to institute in the near future. Conditions in Porto Rico are ripe for the practice of intensive forestry from the start. Formerly well timbered, the Island is now only sparsely wooded. Not only have its inhabitants,—now numbering 1,116,000 or 325 persons per square mile,—drawn freely upon this resource in the past, and even destroyed it to make way for agriculture and cattle raising, but considerable timber has also been exported.

"A dense population, geographic isolation, short hauling distances, a productive soil, a year round growing season, and an abundant native tree flora, not to mention exotics, constitute the materials at hand. The forest fire menace is negligible and frosts are unknown, although excessive precipitation, the trade-winds, and an occasional hurricane will have to be given consideration. The production of cabinet woods for export will have no place in Porto Rican forestry, since local consumption will take care of all that the lands available for forestry will produce. Wood for fuel is most urgently needed, also for posts and house piling, structural materials for native use, and for boxes and crates for the shipment abroad of the fruit and other products of the Island.

"Altogether the working out of a successful forest policy to meet these various needs, as well as the demands for a protective cover to aid in the control of erosion, for shade along roads and in cattle pastures, and the like, holds out alluring possibilities for those who would enter a pioneer field."

He attends the Unitarian church and in politics is a Republican. From December, 1902, to June, 1905, he served as private in Troop A (National Lancers), 1st Battalion Cavalry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. At Yale he received an election to Sigma Xi. He is a member of the American Forestry Association and the Society of American Foresters, is a Mason and belongs to the Somerville Lodge, 917, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Gustave C. Piché

Business address, Care of the Department of Lands and Forests, Quebec, Canada

Residence, 64 St. Cyrille Street, Quebec, Canada

Gustave Clodomir Piché was born December 2, 1880, in Montreal, Quebec, Canada, the son of Clodomir Piché (died in 1882), and Marie (Heppel) Piché. His father was a descendant of the first French settlers that arrived in Canada about 1663. His mother was married a second time, in 1887, to D. Villeneuve of Berthierville, Quebec. Her ancestor, Pierre Heppel, who came to Quebec in 1792, was a surgeon in Lafayette's army. He has a step-sister, Eva (Villeneuve) Piette, of Berthierville.

He graduated from Mount Saint Louis in 1897, after which he was employed three years as a clerk on the Canadian Pacific Railway and then in the Belgo-Canadian Company, where he was in charge of the wood department from 1900 to 1903. From 1903 to 1905 he attended the Polytechnical School of Montreal.

He was married September 24, 1907, in Montreal, Quebec, to Miss Césarine P. Paré of Montreal, daughter of Cyrille Paré and Dorimène Le Noblet (Duplessis) Paré. They have four daughters: Claudette Piché, born June 15, 1908, in Berthierville, Quebec; Simone Piché, born August 21, 1909, in Quebec; Pierrette Piché, born December 12, 1910, in Quebec, and Marie-Paule Piché, born May 31, 1912, in Quebec.

In 1907, Piché entered the Forest Service in Quebec as forestry engineer and in 1909 became chief forestry engineer. In 1910, he received the appointments of chief of the Forest Service and director of the École Forestière of Quebec, his present positions. He writes: "Visited France, Italy, Germany and Sweden in 1909-10, on the account of the Quebec government. In 1908, worked at the inventory of the Riding Mountain Forest Reserve in Manitoba. Since 1907, I have visited every section of the Province to investigate the forest and agricultural conditions. These reports are filed in the Department of Lands and Forests."

He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He is a member of the American and Canadian Forestry associations, the Canadian Society of Forestry Engineers, the French, Belgian and Swiss societies of forestry, the Alliance Nationale (a benevolent society) and in 1913 was elected an associate member of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers.

Colin C. Robertson

Care of Forest Department, Pretoria, South Africa

Colin Charles Robertson was born November 1, 1884, in Haileybury College, Hertfordshire, England, the son of James Robertson (died in 1903), a clergyman in the Church of England, master at Rugby and Harrow Schools and headmaster of Haileybury College, and Constance Elizabeth (Wilson) Robertson. On his father's side he is of Scotch, and on his mother's of English ancestry. He has three brothers: A. J. Robertson, M.A. Cambridge University; M. Robertson, M.A. Oxford University; and D. H. Robertson, B.A. Cambridge University; and two sisters: S. M. Robertson and G. C. Robertson.

He attended the Rugby School in 1902, and from February, 1903, to June, 1905, was a member of the Forestry Department in Orange Free State, South Africa.

He is unmarried.

From October, 1907, to March, 1912, Robertson was assistant conservator of forests in Orange Free State, and since April, 1912, when the various forest departments in South Africa were reorganized into one Forest Department, he has held the position of research officer at the office of the chief conservator of forests, Pretoria, South Africa.

He is a member of the Church of England. He is a member of the South African Association for the Advancement of Science, of which he was a member of the Council in 1911-12, the Philosophic Society of Orange Free State, of which he was secretary in 1911-12, the Royal Colonial Institute and the Old Rugbeian Society.

He has published: Farm forestry in Orange Free State, Bull. Forest Department, South Africa; Some suggestions as to principles of the introduction of exotic forest trees, Jrl. S. African Ass'n for Adv. of Sc.

David N. Rogers

Quincy, Calif.

David N. Rogers was born April 7, 1882, in Patten, Maine, the son of Luther B. Rogers and Mary E. (Barker) Rogers. He has three brothers: Edwin S. Rogers, Lore Alford Rogers, B.S. University of Maine '06, and graduate student at the University of Wisconsin, and Luther B. Rogers, Jr., C.E. University of Maine; and three sisters: Mary H. Rogers, Annie L. Rogers and Ruth Rogers.

He was prepared at Patten Academy, Patten, Maine, and in 1906 received the degree of B.S. from the University of Maine, where he was a member of Kappa Sigma.

He was married October 30, 1912, in Quincy, Calif., to Miss Edith Watson of Quincy, daughter of William and Mary Frances Watson.

Rogers is forest supervisor in the United States Forest Service with headquarters in the Plumas National Forest, California. He was appointed forest assistant in the Service July 1, 1907, and later became deputy forest supervisor.

In politics he is a Progressive.

Robert Rosenbluth

Business address, Conservation Commission, Albany, N. Y.

Home address, 522 West 150th Street, New York City

Robert Rosenbluth was born February 28, 1887, in New York City, the son of Selig Rosenbluth, superintendent of a large hospital, and Anna (Glantz) Rosenbluth. He is of Russian German ancestry on both sides of the family.

In 1903 he graduated from Philadelphia High, after which he studied as a "special in agriculture" at Pennsylvania State College. He afterward attended the Forest Academy at Mount Alto, Pa.

He is unmarried.

Rosenbluth was employed as forest assistant in the United States Forest Service in 1907 and in the same year became forester in the Bureau of Forestry with headquarters in the Philippine Islands. In 1910-11 he was forest assistant in the Service and in 1911-12 was state forester for the Conservation Commission of New York State. Since July 8, 1912, he has held the position of director of forest investigations for the Conservation Commission of New York State.

He writes: "Travel since leaving Yale has embraced practically all the states in this country; Hawaii; the Philippine Islands; China and Japan. Most interesting was the work in the Philippines, not only in exploration of new countries and under conditions entirely different from those at home, but in the scientific and practical value of the results. There was enough excitement incidental to these explorations to satisfy one for the time. In China and Japan I got an insight into these great civilizations and the currents of interest. Especially interesting was an extended trip in those parts of China where the revolution was at its height but a short time later. In District 4, I did extensive work along the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and also in the desert regions of Nevada. Since then, have been on the intensive problems of New York State."

Concerning politics, Rosenbluth writes: "Am a Democrat—progressive, with strong leanings toward Socialism; believe, however, that the Democratic party is a more efficient means towards that end than is the present Socialist party." He is a member of the Y. M. C. A.

He has written: Forestry for China, Nat. Rev., Shanghai; Forestry for farm and county estates, Bull. Conservation Com. He is preparing an article on Lumber trade of the Chinese Empire, to be printed in the Forestry Quarterly.

William C. Shepard

R. F. D. 59, Berlin, Conn.

William Chambers Shepard was born March 29, 1883, in Ogdensburg, N. Y., the son of Leonard Griffin Shepard, chief of the United States Revenue Cutter Service, and Isabel (Sharpe) Shepard. He has one brother, Leonard Griffin Shepard, M.E. Cornell '03.

He was prepared at the high schools in Washington, D. C., and in 1901 entered the Cornell Forestry School, leaving in 1903 when the School was discontinued. He was a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity. Before entering the Yale Forest School, he worked two years with a lumber company in West Virginia. He received the degree of F.E. at Cornell in 1907.

He was married October 7, 1909, in Berlin, Conn., to Miss Katrina Sloat Bowers of Bridgeport, Conn., daughter of Dr. William C. Bowers, Yale '74. They have one son, William Bowers Shepard, born September 27, 1910, in Berlin, Conn., and one daughter, Katrina Sloat Shepard, born October 8, 1912, in Berlin, Conn.

Shepard was employed as forest assistant by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company from May 15, 1907, to November 1, 1909, when he became assistant forester for the same company. He has lately resigned from this position and is managing a prosperous farm in Berlin, Conn.

He is a member of the Presbyterian church and belongs to the Society of American Foresters.

Charles P. Wilber

Business address, Forest Commission, State House, Trenton, N. J.

Home address, Bishop Place, New Brunswick, N. J.

Charles Parker Wilber was born October 23, 1882, in New Brunswick, N. J., the son of Francis Augustus Wilber, professor at Rutgers College, New Jersey, and Laura Burge (Parker) Wilber. He is of English and Scotch ancestry. He has one brother, F. E. Wilber, B.D. New Brunswick Theological Seminary, and one sister, L. E. Wilber, B.A. Smith College.

He was prepared at the Rutgers Preparatory School and received the degrees of B.A. in 1905 and M.A. in 1908 from Rutgers College, where he was a member of Chi Psi.

He is unmarried.

Wilber was employed with the William M. Ritter Lumber Company of West Virginia from June, 1907, to January, 1908, when he became forest assistant in District 4 of the United States Forest Service. Since July, 1910, he has held the position of New Jersey state fire warden for the New Jersey Forest Commission.

He writes: "Nearly two million acres of forest, largely within reach of densely populated centers, traversed by an unusual mileage of good roads, criss-crossed by a thousand miles of railroad, and in large part without the telephone, present in New Jersey a field of work in forest protection in which a strong foundation has been laid, but which still offers a wide scope for work on the superstructure.

"Control of this situation now rests on a state fire warden with four helpers, 275 local men under a township warden system, and a small corps of fire lookouts and patrolmen. Though it has its weaknesses, experience has proved that the local system can eventually be relied on. The public understands the fight on fire because it sees results and the local effort producing them. The short step from forest protection to forest development is taken by yearly increasing numbers. An annual retainer of $10 to $20 to the wardens, with reasonable but not attractive pay to them and all fighters at a fire, elicits creditable activity and ready response whenever need arises. A strict requirement of permits for all brush burning throughout the year but latitude in handling individual situations by special annual permits has engendered universal caution without causing excessive inconvenience. Rigid imposition of some penalty for every violation of the law, but the possibility of a reasonable adjustment of its severity to the specific case, have made supporters instead of enemies of most offenders.

"High efficiency comes slowly, but the fires are growing smaller and their aggregate area less. Carelessness is giving way to caution. Offenders punished now number hundreds yearly. The woodlands, so repeatedly burned heretofore and long rated of little value, are showing the effect of fire control, for forests are spontaneous throughout the state and their recuperative powers prodigious. New Jersey, therefore, stands committed to a policy of establishing forest values, existent and potential, by guaranteed protection from fire."

He is a member of the Dutch Reformed church. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters, the Eastern States Forestry Association, the National Geographic Society and the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo.

Hugo Winkenwerder

*Edward S. Woodruff

Died 1909

Edward Seymour Woodruff was born December 23, 1876, in New York City, the son of Charles Hornblower Woodruff, Yale '58, and Catherine G. (Sanford) Woodruff. He was a grandson of Hon. Lewis Bartholomew Woodruff, LL.D., Yale '30, judge of the United States Circuit Court, and a great grandson of Chief Justice Joseph C. Hornblower of New Jersey.

He was a nephew of Col. George B. Sanford, Yale '63. He had three brothers: Lewis B. Woodruff, Yale '90, Frederick S. Woodruff, Yale '92, and Charles H. Woodruff, Jr., ex-'96 (died in February, 1909).

He was prepared at Phillips (Andover) Academy, of whose New York Alumni Association his father was the first president, and in 1899 graduated from Yale College. He then spent a year in biological study in the Graduate Department of Johns Hopkins University, followed by a short period with an investment firm in New York City. In his Senior year at the Yale Forest School he was president of his Class, was elected to Sigma Xi and, upon graduating, was appointed a member of the Graduate Advisory Board.

He was unmarried.

In the summer of 1907 Woodruff became a state forester of New York. In this position he gave his attention chiefly to reforestation in the Adirondack Mountains. He was deeply interested in research work in botany, entomology and ornithology, of which he gained much knowledge in the country about Litchfield, Conn.

He died January 15, 1909, in New York City of typhoid fever and was buried in Litchfield, Conn., where he had spent a large part of his life.

His published work was principally upon birds, and included Summer birds of Milford, Pike County, Pa., in Cassinia Bird Manual, 1905; A preliminary list of the birds of Shannon and Carter Counties, Missouri, The Auk, April, 1908; and Scarcity of the ruffed grouse, 13th Annual Report of the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission of New York; also a paper (published in this report) on "Destruction of white and Scotch pine seedlings by the white grub."

He became a partner of the firm in February, 1912.

NON GRADUATES

J. Franklin Bruins

Box 249, Pocatello, Idaho

John Franklin Bruins was born July 24, 1883, in Brandon, Wis., the son of Derk Bruins, a successful farmer (now retired), and Cristina (Heusinknelt) Bruins. His father was a prominent citizen and church worker in the farming community where he lived. His ancestors on his father's side were Dutch farmers, his grandfather having come from the Netherlands to America as an immigrant in 1847. His mother is the descendant of a Dutch family, her parents having come to this country from the Netherlands in 1850. He has three brothers: William H. Bruins, a graduate of Hope College and McCormick Theological Seminary, Henry M. Bruins, a graduate of Hope College and B.A. Princeton '96, and Dirk Bruins, B.A. Ripon College and M.D. Northwestern University; and a sister, Minnie H. Bruins, who attended the University of Wisconsin.

He was brought up on a farm, working there during his vacations. He attended Ripon College, where he was a newspaper correspondent and manager of the college paper, and in 1905 graduated from Beloit College with the degree of B.A.

He was married July 12, 1911, in Madison, Wis., to Miss Rose Wagner of Menasha, Wis., daughter of Henry Wagner.

Since October 1, 1910, Bruins has been forest supervisor in the United States Forest Service with headquarters at Pocatello, Idaho. From 1906 to 1908 he was forest assistant in the Service and from 1908 to 1910 held the position of deputy forest supervisor.

He writes: "As a forest assistant I was one of the second batch to be sent to the National forests. I was first assigned to the Old Henry's Lake in Idaho. I was there principally concerned with timber sale work and secured some figures on the workings of the log scale in use in the Service which I am told has been of much value. The following summer I spent in the Washington office of the Service as district forester. Was shortly afterward sent to the Leadville National Forest in Colorado, where I remained about a year and a half doing principally administrative work. In the spring of 1909 I was transferred to the Targhee as deputy supervisor, work altogether administrative, and that fall was placed in charge of the Pocatello Forest, where I have been since. My principal interest from a professional standpoint is in forestation problems. Since I have been on this forest I have had a chance to engage in that line on an extensive scale with some degree of success, but with results still mainly undetermined."

He is affiliated with the Congregational church. He is a member of the Society of American Foresters and of the Y. M. C. A.

Harrison DeW. Burrall

Upon entering the United States Forest Service Allen became forest assistant in the office of management, Washington, D. C. From December, 1908, to June, 1909, he was chief of the section of timber sales, District 2, in Denver, Colo., and from that time until December, 1909, he did special work in the Service. He was then appointed deputy forest supervisor, which position he held until his present appointment of forest supervisor of Shoshone National Forest, Wyoming, June 15, 1911.

He is a member of the Presbyterian church and in politics is a Progressive Republican.

Nelson C. Brown

Business address, New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse, N. Y.

Residence, Cor. Ostrom and Waverly Avenues, Syracuse, N. Y.

Nelson Courtlandt Brown was born March 1, 1885, in South Orange, N. J., the son of Ashbel Greene Brown, a Civil War veteran, and Lucinda Ann (Van Duyne) Brown. On his father's side he is of English, and on his mother's of Dutch and English ancestry. He has two brothers:

Irving Van Duyne Brown, Yale '02, and David Crane Brown; and one sister, Olive Miriam Brown.

He was prepared at South Orange High School and graduated from Yale College in 1906.

He was married August 23, 1911, in Milford, Pa., to Miss Alice Virginia Baker of Milford, Pa., daughter of H. T. Baker and Virginia (Halliday) Baker.

Brown is assistant professor of forest utilization in the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University. He has held this position since July 1, 1912.

He writes: "In 1904 spent the summer on general trip through the forest regions of California, Colorado and the Southwest. Was instructor at Yale Forest Camp at Milford, Pa., between Junior and Senior years at the Forest School. In July, 1908, I entered the United States Forest Service, going first to Montana to classify and value the Northern Pacific Railway holdings. The winter of 1909 was spent in Florida, in the interests of the government. During the summer of 1909, I had charge of a survey party on the Gallatin and Absaroka National forests in the neighborhood of Yellowstone Park. While on a furlough, in 1910, at home in South Orange, N. J., I sold bonds for the banking house of Lee Higginson & Company for awhile."

Again, in 1910, he was instructor at the Yale Forest Camp at Milford, Pa. During 1910-11 he was deputy supervisor of the Kaniksu National Forest in Idaho. He resigned from the Service in 1911, to become assistant professor of forestry in the Iowa State College, at Ames, Iowa. In July, 1912, he entered upon his present position in the New York State College of Forestry.

Brown is a Presbyterian and is a member of the Yale Club of New York City, the Society of American Foresters, the American Forestry Association and the Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

He has written: Reproduction of lodgepole pine in relation to its management, For. Quart., March, 1912; Possibility of reproducing our eastern forests by natural means (read before annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, Bushkill, Pa., 1912). In 1909 he wrote an article, Forest conditions of Florida, which is to be published as a bulletin by the U. S. Forest Service. He has also written miscellaneous articles for the Forestry Quarterly.

Frederick H. Brundage

Business address, Care Forest Service, Albany, Ore.

Residence, 1022 West 8th Street, Albany, Ore.

Frederick Herbert Brundage was born December 8, 1884, in Factoryville, Pa., the son of George L. Brundage, M.D., and Lavina (Gardner) Brundage. He has two sisters: Kate (Brundage) Dean and Helen E. Stevens.

He was prepared at Keystone Academy and at Adelphi Academy, and graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1907, where he was a member of Book and Bond.

He was married December 29, 1909, in Bethel, Maine, to Miss Mary L. Carter of Bethel, Maine, daughter of John H. Carter and Carrie (Clough) Carter. They have one son, George Herbert Brundage, born December 24, 1912, in Bellingham, Wash.

Since the fall of 1912 Brundage has been supervisor of Santiam National Forest with headquarters at Albany, Ore. Before entering the United States Forest Service as forest assistant in 1909, he had been employed by the Great Northern Pulp & Paper Company of Bangor, Maine. On April 1, 1911, he was appointed deputy forest supervisor with headquarters at Bellingham, Wash.

He is a member of the Baptist church.

Elias T. Clark

University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.

Elias Treat Clark was born September 1, 1886, in Woodbridge, Conn., the son of Samuel O. Clark and Carrie P. (Marquette) Clark. His father was a descendant of the early settlers of the state and was a member of the Connecticut legislature and holder of numerous town offices. He has three brothers: Charles Edward Clark, Yale '11 and '14 L., S. Orman Clark and Theodore R. Clark.

He was prepared at the New Haven High School and graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1907.

He is unmarried.

Concerning his life since graduation, Clark writes: "Have led a rather uneventful life since leaving the Forest School in June, 1908. Was immediately assigned to the Snoqualmie National Forest with headquarters in Seattle, Wash. Here I spent three of the most enjoyable years of my life working under Supervisor Burt P. Kirkland and helping him to bring this great Pacific Coast Forest under forest management. Did the work common to most forest assistants and in addition aided in preparing the provisional working plan for the forest made in 1909 and 1910. A year and a half after assignment to the forest was made deputy supervisor, which position was held until March, 1911, when I resigned to take charge of the surveying and construction of railroad lines for the Standard Railway & Timber Company, one of the largest operating timber companies in Washington. Here an interesting and enjoyable summer was spent until October, 1911, when a call came to take a chair of assistant professor of forestry at the Forest School of the University of Washington, to give mensuration courses and to establish a course in logging engineering.

"Have never taken trips far outside of the United States, but have visited most parts of it."

Clark is a Progressive Republican. He is a member of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Seattle and the Society of American Foresters.

He made an address before the Pacific Logging Congress on logging engineering, which was published in August, 1912, in numbers of lumber trade journals.

He was married June 22, 1911, in Killingly, Conn., to Miss Bertha Marion Branch of Danielson, Conn., daughter of Walter Hamlet Branch, deceased, and Ella Maria Branch, now Mrs. F. H. Greener. They have one daughter, Helen Melissa Clark, born November 10, 1912, in Litchfield, Conn.

Clark is forest assistant in the United States Forest Service. He writes: "July to November, 1908, spent in Kentucky under J. S. Holmes studying forest conditions in coöperation with the state. Became thoroughly familiar with corn bread, moonshiners and night-riders. January to July, 1909, was in Alabama, for first three months under W. B. Piper. Then was put in charge of making a working plan for the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company. This working plan is notable since it was the last of many perfectly harmless working plans made by the Service for concerns whose only concern was for an estimate of their timber. September to November, 1909, lived among the Indians. Had charge of marking timber for the Government mill at Neopit, Wis. July to November, 1910, worked in Piedmont, N. C., under State Forester J. S. Holmes in coöperation with the state in determining the timber resources of North Carolina. December, 1910, to April, 1911, assisted W. W. Ashe in a study of second growth in eastern Tennessee. May 15, 1911, transferred from state and private coöperation to Appalachian and sent to New Hampshire to work under K. W. Woodward, examining lands for purchase under the Weeks Law. The last of June came South to take charge of a party examining lands in eastern West Virginia and western Virginia. The first of February, 1912, made a preliminary examination of the Massanutten Area and recommended its purchase by the Government. From May in general charge of work in the Potomac, Massanutten and Youghiogheny areas in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia."

He is a member of the First Congregational Church of Cornwall, Conn., and belongs to the Society of American Foresters and the Free and Accepted Masons.

Harvey R. MacMillan

Business address, Forest Branch, Victoria, B. C., Canada

Harvey Reginald MacMillan was born September 9, 1885, in Newmarket, Ontario, the son of John Alfred MacMillan, holder of local municipal offices, and Joanne Caroline (Willson) MacMillan. His grandfather came from Scotland and his grandmother was a United Empire Loyalist. His mother's family was loyal to the United Empire. They settled in the United States about 1690 and went to Canada in 1760 and 1780.

He was prepared at the Adelphi Academy and Worcester High School and in 1906 graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College, Toronto University, with the degree of B.S.A. Since 1903 he has spent his summers with the Dominion Forestry Branch. He had charge of the first forest survey in Canada.

He was married August 2, 1911, in Aurora, Ontario, to Miss Edna Mulloy of Aurora, daughter of Charles Wesley Mulloy and Gertrude (Clafin) Mulloy. They have a daughter, Edna Marion MacMillan, born June 16, 1912.

MacMillan is chief of the Forest Branch of British Columbia, Canada. From 1908 to 1911 he was assistant inspector of forest reserves and assistant director of forestry from 1911 to July 15, 1912, when he received his present appointment.

He writes: "I have recently left the service of the Dominion Forestry Branch, and am at present chief forester of the Provincial Forest Branch, recently established to administer the public forest lands of the province of British Columbia.

"British Columbia covers about 350,000 square miles, and is very similar in character to Washington, Oregon and Idaho. The timber in the southern portion of the Province is similar to that north of the 45th parallel of latitude, and west of the 115th parallel of longitude in the United States, with the difference that the valleys in British Columbia are narrower, and the mountains are steeper and higher, and there is a smaller proportion of very heavy timber. In the northern portion of British Columbia the timber consists chiefly of spruce and large pine, and does not extend far from the rivers and lakes.

"The merchantable area of the Province has been estimated at from 50 to 60 million acres.

"The Government has pursued the policy of refusing to part with the title of timber land. Only about one million acres of timber land have been granted in fee simple to private parties. About nine million acres of timber land have been leased to private individuals. The remainder of the forest land, consisting chiefly of timber at present considered inaccessible, and all burned-over land covered with reproduction is still in the hands of the Crown.

"The present revenue of the Province from timber leases and from the royalty of 50 cents per thousand charged on all timber cut amounts to $2,600,000 per year. This revenue will be largely increased as the development proceeds. The indications are now that there will be a rapid advance in the next few years.

"The new Forest Branch has been formed under the guidance of Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Price, to administer the timber lands and to develop the country by a wise forestry policy for the Province. The Forest Branch is very young. There are at present about twenty foresters, but the indications are that the staff will need to be very largely increased during the next two or three years. In order that the rangers and foresters may be secured it is the intention of the Government to establish a forestry school in connection with the new provincial university."

He is a member of the Presbyterian church. In 1910 he was appointed Canadian representative to the Convention of the International Association of Forest Experiment Stations at Brussels. He is a member of the Canadian Society of Forest Engineers, of which he is a member of the executive committee, the Ottawa Field Naturalists Society, the Ontario Entomological Society and the Canadian Alpine Club, and is a Mason.

He has published: Forest conditions, Crowsnest Valley, Alta.; Forest products, Canada, 1908; Forest fires, Canada, 1908 and 1910; Lumber, lath shingles, Canada, 1909 and 1910; Poles purchased, Canada, 1909, 1910 and 1911; Pulpwood, Canada, 1909, 1910 and 1911; Cross ties purchased, Canada, 1909 and 1910; Mining timbers, Canada, 1910; Tight slack cooperage, Canada, 1909 and 1910; Tanning materials, Canada, 1909; Annual Report, Dept. of Interior, Canada, 1909, 1911 and 1912; numerous articles in Canadian periodicals.

Dak., and from 1904 to 1906 held the same position at Huron College, Huron, S. Dak.

He is unmarried.

Miller is at present dean of the Department of Forestry at the University of New Brunswick. He entered upon this position in September, 1909. He writes: "Was called to the University of New Brunswick when the Department of Forestry was founded in provincial university in 1908. Now have about twenty-five students and have graduated three classes in forestry. Graduates are taking positions with lumber companies, paper companies, Dominion Forestry Branch, Canadian Pacific Railroad Forestry Branch, and have three men with British Columbia Branch, Victoria, B. C. Received gold medal for best exhibit of woods at Dominion Exhibition, St. John, N. B., in fall of 1910. In the fall of 1912 was appointed forester by the Senate of the University of New Brunswick, having charge of 3,600 acres of college lands. Beginning to make an estimate and working plan for same, with the coöperation of the Forestry Branch, Ottawa. In fall of 1912 built a camp on this land and am trying to give a good, practical, undergraduate course in forestry."

Miller is a member of the Presbyterian church.

He has published articles in the Canadian Forestry Journal and Canadian Lumberman, and is writing an article on Forest resources of the maritime provinces for a book entitled "Canada and its provinces," to be published by Robert Glasgow, Toronto, Canada.

Barrington Moore

United States Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

Barrington Moore was born September 25, 1883, in Ossining, N. Y., the son of Clement Clarke Moore, an architect and a captain in the 22d Massachusetts Regiment in the Civil War (deceased), and Laura Martha (Williams) Moore. He is the grandson of Benjamin Moore and the great-grandson of Clement Clarke Moore, the author of "The Night Before Christmas." On his mother's side he is the grandson of William S. Williams. He has two brothers: William S. Moore and Benjamin Moore, Harvard '08. A cousin, Benjamin B. Moore, graduated from Yale in 1899.

He was prepared at St. Mark's School, Southboro, Mass., at Craigie's School and at the Morristown School, Morristown, N. J. In 1906 he graduated from Yale College, where he received a Junior dissertation appointment and engaged in football and track athletics. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi. During the summer after his junior year in college he worked as student assistant in the United States Forest Service in North Carolina.

He was married December 20, 1910, in New York City, to Miss Muriel Hennen Morris of New York City, daughter of Thurlow Weed Barnes and Isabel (Morris) Barnes. They have a son, Clement C. Moore, born May 12, 1913, in Washington, D. C.

Moore is forest examiner in the United States Forest Service, being engaged in the construction of working plans at the Washington office. He has been engaged in this work since July, 1909. Of his life since graduation from the Forest School, he wrote in 1911: "The year following graduation I spent studying forest problems in all the important foreign countries where forestry is practiced. The trip was interesting, not to say exciting in spots, particularly the four months in India, where I tried conclusions with a wild buffalo and a tiger, successfully in the case of the latter. On my return to the United States, July 1, 1909, I entered the United States Forest Service and was sent to District 3, the Southwest headquarters, Albuquerque, N. Mex. My work has been almost entirely what is called reconnaissance—mapping and estimating timber for the future management of the forests."

He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church. He is a member of the Yale Club and Chevy Chase Club.

He has published: (With R. L. Rogers) Notes on balsam fir, For. Quart., Spring, 1908; Notes on forests of northern India and Burma, Indian Forester, April and May, 1909; Forestry in Japan, Am. For., about Aug., 1909; Forestry problems in the Philippines, Am. For., about March and April, 1910; Some methods of regulating the cut in the coniferous forests of the Himalayas, For. Quart., 1910; Checking the floods in the French Alps, Am. For., about April, 1910; (With R. L. Rogers) A method of assessing fire damage, For. Quart., Summer, 1911; Nomenclature of divisions (or areas) in forest working plans, For. Quart., Fall, 1911; Management of western yellow pine in the Southwest, For. Quart., 1st no., 1912; Essentials in forest working plans, Proc. Soc. Am. Foresters, VI, No. 2; Methods of regulating the cut for national forests, Proc. Soc. Am. Foresters, VII, No. 1.

Thornton T. Munger

Business address, Forest Service, Portland, Ore.

Home address, 202 Prospect Street, New Haven, Conn.

Thornton Taft Munger was born October 3, 1883, in North Adams, Mass., the son of Rev. Theodore Thornton Munger, D.D., Yale '51, and Elizabeth Kuirman (Duncan) Munger, who died in 1883. His father was a Congregational minister, having received the degree of D.D. from Harvard and Yale, and was a member of the Yale Corporation and of the National Institute of Arts and Letters. He is the grandson, on his father's side, of Ebenezer Munger, a physician, Yale 1814, and Cynthia (Selden) Munger, of Connecticut, and the great-grandson of Eleazar May, Yale 1752. On his mother's side he is the grandson of James H. Duncan, Harvard 1812, and LL.D. Brown 1861, a lawyer and member of Congress, and Mary (Willis) Duncan, both of Massachusetts. He has three sisters: Rosanna May Munger; Eleanor Duncan (Munger) Wells, wife of Philip P. Wells, Ph.D. '89, of Washington, D. C.; and Elizabeth Willis (Munger) Adams, wife of Professor John C. Adams, Yale '96, of New Haven, assistant professor of English at Yale.

He was prepared at the New Haven High School and at the Hotchkiss School, and graduated from Yale College in 1905, and was active in Dwight Hall work. He spent the year of 1905-06 abroad, three months of which were devoted to study of forestry in Germany.

He is unmarried.

He writes: "On entering the Forest Service, July 1, 1908, I was assigned to the Section of Silvics and after six weeks in Washington I was sent to Oregon to make a study of 'the encroachment of Lodgepole pine on western yellow pine on the east slope of the Cascades in Oregon.' Upon the completion of this study, December 1, 1908, I was assigned to the Section of Silvics as the chief in the newly established district office of the Forest Service in Portland, Ore. This position I have since held. My work has consisted in making a large number of silvical studies in the National Forests of this region and of field work in connection with timber sales and reconnaissance. A little over half my time has been spent in Portland and the balance in the field in various parts of Oregon and Washington."

Munger is a Progressive Republican. He is a member of the United Church (Congregational) of New Haven. He belongs to the Society of American Foresters, the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, the Irvington Tennis Club and University Club, both of Portland.

Dillon P. Tierney

Business address, State Capitol, St. Paul, Minn.

Residence, 699 Lincoln Avenue, St. Paul, Minn.

Dillon Parnell Tierney was born March 4, 1882, in Farmington, Minn., the son of Thomas Tierney and Mary (Sullivan) Tierney. He is of Irish ancestry. He has four brothers: Edward, Arthur, Charles and Phillip Tierney, and two sisters: Alice and Mayme Tierney.

He was prepared at the Farmington High School, Farmington, Minn., and at an agricultural school, and in 1906 received the degree of B.Sc.F. from the University of Minnesota, where he was a member of Alpha Zeta.

He was married November 15, 1910, in Minneapolis, Minn., to Miss Esther A. Day of Owatonna, Minn., daughter of Levi E. Day. They have a daughter, Helen Louise Tierney, born February 21, 1912.

After graduation from the Yale Forest School Tierney became forester for the Kaul Lumber Company and was later employed in the United States Forest Service. He was then appointed instructor in the University of Minnesota, being placed in charge of the Forest Experiment Station. Since May 15, 1911, he has held the position of assistant state forester of Minnesota.

He writes: "The first organized attempt to carry on forestry work in Minnesota was authorized by the passage of the 1911 Forest Law. A few months later I undertook to hold down the job of assistant state forester. In this position I have had a try at nearly every phase of forestry work that one could imagine.

"Fire protection was of course the first work. At the outset we assumed that the majority of fires could be prevented simply by having the right kind of men distributed throughout the forest district, to remind people of the dangers of fire and also point out situations where dangerous fires are liable to occur. This naturally led us to the question of handling fires which originate from railroad rights-of-way and to the disposal of slash following logging operations.

"The railroads are now working in complete harmony with this department, not only to prevent fires being started from their locomotives, but also to extinguish any which may start near the rights-of-way. They now realize that it is money well spent to prevent fires on their rights-of-way, and also—what is of more importance to us—that the care of railroad fires rests with the companies themselves.

"Our district rangers have been selected with the greatest care, and it is on them we depend for working out the details of slash disposal on practically every logging job or woods operation in the state. We have of course made it clear to the rangers what are the objects of slash disposal, but it is up to them to decide on the methods which will fulfill these objects. Under certain conditions the slash must be disposed of as logging proceeds; under others it must be burned in the early spring; or it may be sufficient simply to dispose of the slashings for a specified distance on either side of all logging roads and on the boundaries of the logged-over tract.

"We have divided the forested area of the state into fourteen large districts, with a ranger in charge of each. Under each ranger there are patrolmen, the number of whom varies with the necessity of patrolling against the spread of fires. Aside from this force, each railroad company provides patrolmen sufficient to protect their rights-of-way. The lumber and mining companies provide patrolmen of their own accord or when requested to do so. A number of the townships have also levied a special tax, to pay for a township patrolman and provide a fire fighting fund. Telephones, trails, cabins and lookout towers have been constructed to aid in the fire protection work.

"The opportunities for forestry work, I believe, are the best in this state of any east of the Rockies. A great quantity of timber is still uncut, and its utilization is a field in which the forester may help. At present only a small area of land is under the exclusive management of this department. The disposal of three and one-half millions of acres of state school lands is provided for in the state constitution, but since a great deal of this land is suitable only for growing timber, the constitution will eventually be changed so that the forest land can be handled as such. Aside from this there are millions of acres of privately owned land which must in time come back to the state and will be used for the growth of timber. We are gathering data to show the character and extent of all such non-agricultural lands and when we have gathered sufficient data the matter will be in shape for legislation. We have estimated the amount of non-agricultural land in the state which should be kept growing timber continuously, at about fifteen million acres. To acquire such an amount of land and put it under forest management looks like some job for the foresters."

He is a member of the Roman Catholic church. He is a member of the Conservation Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the Knights of Columbus.

Hubert C. Williams

Business address, McCall, Idaho

Home address, Lakeville, Conn.

Hubert Coffing Williams was born August 22, 1884, in Lakeville, Conn., the son of Hubert Williams and Claire Kingman (Coffing) Williams. His father held the positions of state representative, president of the State Fish and Game Commission, postmaster, president of the Litchfield County University Club and president of the County Bar Association. He has one sister, Margaret Holly Williams.

He graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School in 1906, where he was a member of Delta Phi.

He is unmarried.

Williams is deputy supervisor in the Idaho National Forest. From July, 1908, to July, 1910, he was in the employ of the Goodman Lumber Company, Goodman, Wis. While in this position he was first postmaster of Goodman, Wis. "On May 8, 1911," he writes, "left home for Ogden, Utah, with a letter from the district forester appointing me forest agent. Upon my arrival at McCall was informed that my position was forest guard. I was soon made temporary forest assistant and am now forest assistant. June 24, 1911, sent on foot by Supervisor J. E. Rothery to Copenhaver Ranger Station to secure Walter Gackel's (ranger) oath of office. Distance forty miles over about ten miles of crusted snow that hid the trail blazes for long stretches on the summits. Streams were all full, making occasional long detours necessary to find foot logs. Got into one trap line, mistaking blazes for the trail blazes, never having been over the route before. Left McCall at 9:30 A. M. on the 24th and had oath of office in the supervisor's office in McCall at 8 o'clock, June 25th.

"Mixed it up with a family of bears—an old she and two cubs on July 26, 1912, while on timber reconnaissance. Treed the cubs and went between them and 'the Mrs.' As she came back shot her with a Luger pistol (.30 cal.) and then got one of the cubs."

Concerning his politics, Williams writes: "Not identified with any party, voting for the man whom I consider best qualified to fill the office for which he is candidate."

He studied and assisted his father one year and the next year attended Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa.

He is unmarried.

Fitzwater is supervisor in the United States Forest Service with headquarters in Pend Oreille National Forest, which position he has held since August, 1912. He writes: Went to Flagstaff, Ariz., in July, 1908. Spent one month in reconnaissance work on Coconino National Forest. The following month reported to Frank Vogel, Denver, Colo. Was on reconnaissance on Pike National Forest until November and had charge of a party the last month and a half. Upon completion of work had working plan report to make—some kind of job, with no data. Reported at Missoula, District 1, in December. Balance of winter and spring (1909) worked out of district office on Kaniksu, Kootenai and Pend Oreille forests. In July went to Absaroka as deputy supervisor and swung the boundary work; upon its completion was called to Missoula again. Had crew up North Fork Flathead River estimating Great Northern and St. Paul & Milwaukee rights of way. Work stopped in December and was sent to Kaniksu to complete the laying out of the blocks on section 26, fidelity sale (made the original contour map of this the previous spring). In January, 1910, was called to Missoula and spent three months in district office; spent time in volume table work and in teaching at the Ranger School, University of Montana. In April was sent to Superior National Forest as acting forest supervisor and am now supervisor. Have had some good experiences and some not so good. I've traveled by foot and horse, but at present I'm developing web feet."

Rutledge Parker

Business address, Missoula National Forest, Missoula, Mont.

Residence, 501 Stephens Avenue, Missoula, Mont.

Rutledge Parker was born September 19, 1877, in Georgetown County, S. C., the son of Rutledge Parker and Charlotte Meade (Huger) Parker. He is the grandson of Dr. Francis S. Parker and Mary (Taylor) Parker. He has a brother, Dr. John E. Parker, B.S. Union College '01 and M.D. Yale '06, and two sisters: Mrs. John Cheston Morris and Mariamnie Meade Parker.

He graduated from the Porter Military Academy of Charleston, S. C., in 1897 and from that time until January, 1898, worked in the cotton business in Charleston. From 1898 to 1900 he planted rice near Georgetown, S. C., and from 1900 to 1905 was employed by the Atlantic Coast Lumber Company.

He was married July 25, 1910, in Elk Horn Ranch, Granite County, Mont., to Miss Albertina Brown of Philipsburg, Mont., daughter of Frank Dean Brown and Anna Elizabeth (Lenz) Brown.

Parker writes: "I entered the Yale Forest School July 5, 1905, and remained until the following spring, taking the Junior course. I spent the summer vacation of 1906 in the mountains of North Carolina near Asheville recuperating from the strenuous duties at the School. My health was not particularly good at that time so thought it unwise to return to the School the following year. Through the influence and sincere efforts of Mr. Henry S. Graves I received an appointment as forest guard on the Coconino Forest in Arizona. There were a large number of timber sales on the Forest at that time and my work was all along that line. After spending a year in this region I returned to the School in October, 1907, and completed the Senior course. I took the civil service examinations at Silicanzo, Ala., with my Class of 1908, during the spring term of the Senior year. At that time we were studying lumbering conditions of the Kane Lumber Company's holdings. After completing the spring term I returned to Charleston, S. C., shortly afterwards received an appointment as forest assistant and reported to Washington, D. C., July 1, 1908. I left on the same day for Thompson Falls, Mont., and joined a reconnaissance party on the Cabinet National Forest. Our work was principally along the line of timber estimates, together with a general land classification of odd sections included within the primary limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad grant. On November 18, 1908, I was assigned to the Coeur d'Alene National Forest as forest assistant. On July 20, 1909, was transferred to the Kootenai National Forest and a few months afterwards was appointed as deputy forest supervisor. During March of 1911 I was again transferred to the Missoula National Forest as acting forest supervisor, with headquarters at Missoula, Mont. On July 1, 1912, received an appointment as forest supervisor."

He is a member of the Episcopal church. He served at one time in the militia of the State of South Carolina, later in the Territory of Arizona as first sergeant and in Montana as first lieutenant.

From May, 1910, to October, 1910, investigated damage to the bases of chestnut and arborvitae telephone and telegraph poles by wood-boring insects in District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. Much time was spent in traveling with railroad camp crews. From July to December, 1911, investigated the cause of the dying of the pine in the southern states. Some time was spent at Forest Insect Field Station 7, Spartanburg, S. C., in educational work and public demonstrations as to the methods of controlling the southern pine beetle. From March 1 to date have been engaged in investigating the cause of the dying chestnut trees—particularly in the southern states, where the chestnut bark disease is not present. My chief individual work is working out the biology of termites (termes species) and determining methods of preventing damage by them to forest products. The life history of the common species will soon be published for the first time."

Donald Bruce

Business address, Forest Service, Missoula, Mont.

Home address, Easthampton, Mass.

Donald Bruce was born July 23, 1884, in Newtonville, Mass., the son of Wayland Irving Bruce, Yale '82, who died in 1906, and Mary Emily (Skinner) Bruce. An uncle, Wallace Bruce, graduated from Yale College in '67.

He was prepared at Williston Academy, Easthampton, Mass., and graduated from Yale College in 1906. While at college he was a member of the Freshman Union, of the Freshman Banjo and Mandolin clubs, of the Apollo Banjo and Mandolin clubs in his Sophomore year, and of the University Musical clubs in his Junior and Senior years; also of Kitcat Club, Chi Delta Theta, Psi Upsilon, Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi. He was the recipient of the John Bennetto scholarship, of the Thomas Glasby Waterman scholarship, of the Barge Mathematical prize in his Freshman and Sophomore years and of a philosophical oration in his Junior year.

He is unmarried.

Bruce is forest assistant in the United States Forest Service with headquarters at Missoula, Mont. Before entering the Forest Service he spent two years teaching mathematics and physics at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass. He entered the Service July 1, 1910, as forest assistant in the Helena National Forest.

A year later he was transferred to the Coeur d'Alene National Forest, and in January, 1913, received his present assignment. Early in 1911 he wrote:

"Since the career of mechanical engineer and of naval architect had ever seemed, throughout my college course, so equally enticing that a decision between them was exceedingly difficult, it was perhaps only natural that after graduation I should have clutched eagerly the birchen rod of the school teacher. For two years I was instructor of mathematics and physics at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass. Having thus given myself ample time for choosing between the above-mentioned careers, I promptly entered the Yale Forest School, where I spent another two years in trying not to remember with what contempt I had, as an undergraduate, looked upon all members of the graduate departments of the University. Last March I passed through the ordeal of Civil Service examinations with sufficient success to be ordered westward, in July. Ever since I have been contentedly busy on the Helena National Forest, a very scattered area of some nine hundred thousand acres, lying anywhere from one to forty miles from the city of Helena, Mont. My work has been as diverse as is usual in this line of activity—including timber-estimating, land classification, surveying, mapping, and trying to remember which side of a horse it is more orthodox to attempt to ascend—but the major part of my time has been devoted to the Boulder Nursery, where I serve as chief nursemaid to some four million infant pines and firs."

He is a Republican—"probably progressive." He is a member of the Episcopal church.

He has written: A new method of constructing volume tables, For. Quart., June, 1912.

Charles R. Clark

Business address, Dillon, Mont.

Home address, Carthage, Ill.

United States Forest Service, Washington, D. C.

Charles Rollin Clark was born December 13, 1881, in Carthage, Ill., the son of Lot Bozarth Clark, who was in the first class graduated at the University of Illinois, and Matilda Jane (Jackson) Clark. His father has been president of an independent telephone system in Illinois and superintendent of the University of Illinois Experiment Station at Carthage, Ill. His ancestors came from Ireland in 1670 and lived in Virginia until the Civil War. The Jackson family came from Scotland about 1720 and settled in Ohio, coming to Illinois about 1840. He has five brothers and three sisters, five of whom are graduates of the University of Illinois, two are undergraduates and one is a prospective student: Matilda Lenna Clark, B.A. '03; John Ruskin Clark, B.A. '06; Richard Wagner Clark, B.A. '09; Faith Angeline Clark, B.A. '10; William Gladstone Clark, B.S. '12; Chester Arthur Clark, '14; Marshal Grant Clark, '16, and June Jackson Clark, '18.

He studied at the University of Illinois in 1903-04, and then entered the University of Wisconsin, Class of 1907. He received the degree of B.A. in 1909. During the summer of 1906 he worked for the United States Forest Service. While at the University of Wisconsin he served in various positions from private to major of first battalion in the cadet corps.

He was married June 16, 1910, in Ashland, Wis., to Miss Elma Mildred Pugh, daughter of Thomas Edward Pugh and Clara Pugh.

Clark has served as a forest assistant since graduation in 1910. He is located at Dillon, Mont., the headquarters for the Beaverhead National Forest.

Hamilton M. Coan

Business address, Sumpter, Ore.

Home address, 27 West Ninety-seventh Street, New York City

Hamilton Morel Coan was born June 17, 1886, in New York City.

He was prepared at the Montclair High School, Montclair, N. J., and received the degree of B.A. at Princeton University in 1907.

He is unmarried.

Coan writes: "Since graduation from the Yale Forest School in June, 1910, I have been continuously in the employ of the United States Forest Service. For a period of nearly two years I was assigned to work on the Chelan National Forest. This forest adjoins the main range of the Cascade Mountains (in the state of Washington) and has a very rugged topography of which I became fully aware before completing the extensive reconnaissance of the forest. The unique feature of this forest is the long and narrow lake included within its boundaries, which is at once a wonderful piece of natural scenery, and an effective aid to travel and fire protection. My work on this forest consisted almost wholly in estimating timber and in managing a timber sale.

"I am at present located upon the Whitman National Forest (Oregon), where for the past summer (1912) I have engaged in intensive reconnaissance. This work consists in the mapping of topography, the forest types timber cover, and an accurate examination and classification of the land to determine its value for agricultural purposes. In addition, the value of each section (the work thus far has been in surveyed country) is determined for grazing and an accurate 10 per cent. estimate is made by an estimator who works along with the compass—or map man. The accuracy of mapping is dependent to a very large extent on skilled use of the pocket compass and maintaining a consistent pace for all varieties of topography.”

George A. Cromie

Business address, City Hall, New Haven, Conn.

Residence, 14 Compton Street, New Haven, Conn.

George Alexander Cromie was born December 27, 1883, in Scotstown, Quebec, Canada, the son of Henry James Cromie and Annie (Guy) Cromie. He has three sisters and two brothers: Beatrice Maud, Frances R., Flossie Olive, Robert James and Samuel Osborne Cromie.

He was married April 17, 1911, in New Haven, Conn., to Miss Anne Elizabeth Kavanagh, daughter of James Kavanagh and Alice Cullen Kavanagh. They have one son, Leonard James Cromie, born February 2, 1912.

In the fall of 1910 Cromie became a forest assistant for the Canadian Government, but he returned to New Haven in 1911 as superintendent of trees for the city.

He is a member of the Independent Order of Foresters and the New Haven Republican Club.

He has one sister, Glennai Watson Hitchcock.

He was prepared at the Sioux Falls (S. Dak.) High School, worked one year, attended Yankton College two years, and was graduated at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in 1907 with the degree of B.S. Before entering the Yale Forest School he taught in a high school for one year.

He is unmarried.

Hitchcock is deputy supervisor on Ashley National Forest. He writes: "Since leaving Yale I have been engaged chiefly in reconnaissance work in various parts of District 4, with headquarters at Ogden, Utah, going first to the Kaibab Forest, located on the northern border of the Grand Canyon, the only scenery I have ever seen that I have never grown tired of, as there always seemed to be something new about it.

"Shortly after my summer there I spent a month in the pleasant little town of Ogden, whence I was sent as forest assistant to the Sawtooth Forest, where I received my only unpleasant experience in the Service, a four months' furlough. I got a chance to take some cattle to Seattle and so went there and spent a very rainy winter, getting some surveying and drafting to do, which kept me busy part of the time. For the last year I have done a variety of things, from counting sheep to surveying telephone lines, to say nothing of a one man reconnaissance, when I was my own cook, horse wrangler, packer and did a full day's work every day besides."

He is a member of the Congregational church.

Barbour is forest assistant in the United States Forest Service with headquarters at Andrews, N. C. He has been in the Service since July 1, 1912. He writes: "Since the end of spring term of school, which was spent at Crossett, Ark., have been working for the Forest Service in the Smoky Mountains in the extreme southwestern part of North Carolina, at the head of Nantahala River, in Cherokee and Macon counties. This area is known as 'Nantahala.' Am engaged in reconnaissance work (examination of lands proposed for sale to the government). This is a fine country, altitude being from 4,500 to 6,000 feet, very healthy, but hard to travel. No railroads close, roads poor. The timber is mostly virgin, consisting of chestnut, oaks, hickory, poplar and hemlock. The region will make one of the best reserves in the East. About thirty thousand acres are now taken up by the government."

He is a member of the Presbyterian church.

On graduation Geddes became a solicitor for Peters, Byrne & Company, tree surgeons of Pittsburgh, Pa. He recently resigned this position to go with the MacAndrews & Forbes Company. He writes: "I have accepted a position with the MacAndrews & Forbes Company, manufacturers of licorice, and former subsidiary company of the American Tobacco Company. I sail in about three months for Asia Minor, where I shall be assigned to some station in Syria; probably Aleppo, about 100 miles inland from Alexandretta. There I shall endeavor to pick up experience that will fit me for the buying and collection of licorice root for the western branch of the trade. I expect to be located in that part of Asia for at least three years, at the end of which time,—should I survive the Terrible Turk and other vermin,—I shall in all probability return to the States in the employ of the Company here. In a way, I might be called an underground forester. The time before I sail will be spent in New York, where Mrs. Geddes and I will attempt the study of Arabic. If we master that tongue, I shall consider it some conquest: the memory I have of the jargon is an impression that resembles the footprints of a herd of chickens on a wet day."

Assistants	78	9	87
Examiners	3	1	4
Employed	4	1	5
Total in U. S. Forest Service	139	21	160

It is thus seen that of the entire number of men who have attended the Forest School, about 42 per cent are still employed by the Forest Service.

Of the men not now engaged with the Forest Service a total of eighty-six men were formerly employed by the Service. Of these the present occupations are as follows:

	Graduates	Non Graduates	Total
Teaching	21	1	22
State work	10	1	11
Private forestry	8		8
Connected with lumbering	11	1	12
In other U. S. departments	6	1	7
In other occupations	24	2	26
Total	80	6	86

It is thus seen that two-thirds of the men who have left the Forest Service have continued in the profession of forestry and more than half have left to undertake important work in State forestry, teaching, or kindred lines.

VITAL STATISTICS.

In the following table are given the number reported married and the number of sons and daughters born to these men for each of the classes. This table includes the 300 graduates, both those holding the degree of M.F. and those holding certificates, and the 102 non-graduates recorded in this volume. In this table the asterisk signifies decease as elsewhere in this record. When the sex of a child is unreported the number is given in parenthesis in the "boys" column.

Class	Graduates	Non Graduates	Total	Married	Children
